

Question for written answer Z-000078/2017
to the Chair of the Single Supervisory Mechanism Board Rule 131a
Ernest Urtasun (Verts/ALE)

Subject: Obstacles to resolution

Instruments held by retail customers have been shown to pose a potential obstacle to resolution. Is the European Central Bank (ECB) planning to revise the eligibility of those instruments, and if so, in what way?

Does it agree that all Member States should provide in national law for the possibility to revert to a supervisory moratorium tool in the pre-resolution phase? What is its opinion on an appropriate trigger and on the scope for such a moratorium to be adequate?