

European Parliament: Facts and Figures

This Briefing, published by the European Parliamentary Research Service, is designed to provide key facts and figures about the European Parliament, both in the 2014 to 2019 parliamentary term now drawing to a close - and in the seven previous terms since direct elections were introduced in June 1979.

On the following pages you will find graphics of various kinds which:

- detail the composition of the European Parliament now and in the past;
- trace the increase in the number of parties represented in the EP and evolution of political groups;
- chart the rise in the number of women sitting in the Parliament;
- explain the electoral systems used in elections to the Parliament across the Member States;
- show how turnout in European elections compares with that in national elections;
- summarise the activity of the Parliament in the 2014-19 term, and in the 2009-14 term;
- present the annual cost of the Parliament compared with other parliaments;
- outline the composition of the Parliament's main governing bodies.

The Briefing has been updated regularly during the 2014-19 term to take account of latest developments.

New and re-elected MEPs in 2014 (as a percentage of all MEPs)

New MEPs in 2014 were defined as those who did not sit in the EP either in the previous term (2009-2014) or in a preceding one. Overall, of the 751 MEPs, 48.5% were new to the EP in 2014, whilst 51.5% were Members in a previous term. The highest proportion of new MEPs was in Greece (90.5%), whilst the lowest was in Luxembourg (16.7%).

Age of MEPs by Member State

The graph shows the average age of MEPs, together with the maximum and minimum age, per Member State. The average age of Members on 29 March 2019 was 55 years, with the oldest member aged 90 (from France) and the youngest 28 (from Belgium).

At the constituent session in July 2014 the average was 53 years, with the oldest Member aged 91 (from Greece) and the youngest 26 (from Denmark).

Between July 2014 and March 2019, 108 MEPs have been replaced for different reasons. Forty-three MEPs resigned, 6 died and 59 were appointed to an office incompatible with membership of the European Parliament – for instance they became members of their national parliaments or governments.

European Parliament, 1979-2014

Strengths of the political groups in each parliamentary term

The relative size of the political groups in the European Parliament is shown for each of the eight parliamentary terms since the first direct elections in 1979. The data, in percentages of total seats, refer to the constituent session (in July) at the beginning of each parliamentary term. The last column on the right shows the composition of the Parliament as of 29 March 2019.

Source: DG Communication, European Parliament

The colours used to denote political groups in the current parliamentary term are also used in previous terms, so that the history of today's groups can be traced back. However, it should be understood that the names and constitutions of political groups, and indeed their membership, can change frequently. So, whilst we can often identify substantial continuity between the current groups and their predecessors, they cannot in all cases be regarded as the same group with an unbroken history. The category 'others' includes a number of groups which no longer exist.

National parties and political groups in the EP

Over the eight terms of the Parliament to date, the successive increases in the number of Member States and MEPs have been outpaced by the growth in the number of national political parties represented in the EP. However, whilst the number of political groups has remained broadly stable, at between seven and ten, the threshold for forming a group has been raised over time, and groups now tend to include Members from a greater number of Member States than in previous terms.

Proportion of men and women in the EP

The evolution of the proportion of women among all MEPs at the beginning of each parliamentary term shows steady growth, starting at 16.3% in the first term and reaching the highest percentage yet in the current term, at 36.9%. Changes in the composition of the Parliament since July 2014 have slightly decreased the percentage of women, from 36.9% to 36.5%.

Women in EP and EU national parliaments

Comparison between the average representation of women in national parliaments in Member States and in the European Parliament shows that both have increased over time. The line for national parliaments up to 1996 is illustrative only, based on data available for a limited number of Member States. A marked increase in the percentage of women in national parliaments can be seen in the mid-2000s, which is partly a consequence of the introduction of gender quotas for elections in several Member States (France - 2000, Belgium - 2002, Portugal - 2006, Spain - 2007).

The percentage of women MEPs in the current European Parliament varies between 76.9% in Finland and 16.7% in Cyprus and Estonia. In the May 2014 elections, nine Member States had gender quotas, which mostly concern the make-up of electoral lists, with gender proportions applying to both sexes, to avoid the under-representation of either.

Electoral systems for the European Parliament

Voting system and number of MEPs

The EP currently has 751 MEPs, a reduction from the previous Parliament (2009-2014), in which there were 766 MEPs (754 plus 12 for Croatia, which joined in 2013).

MEPs are elected under national electoral systems, but these have to observe certain common principles established in EU law, notably proportional representation. As a general rule, voters can choose between political parties, individual candidates or both. Whilst in some Member States, voters can only vote for a list, with no possibility of changing the order of candidates (closed list), in others voters can express their preference for one or more of the candidates (preferential voting). Instead of a list system, some Member States achieve the latter possibility of preferential voting by using the single transferable vote (STV).

Electoral threshold

EU law allows Member States to establish thresholds of up to 5% of all votes cast as a condition for any party to be allocated seats in the European Parliament. In 14 Member States, there are formal thresholds of this kind. (Logically, in Member States or regions with a relatively low number of MEPs, there is a de facto, if not formal, threshold above 5%.)

Note: The graphics on the left show the situation at the 2014 election. To see the changes that will apply in the 2019 elections, please see our 'at a glance' note, '2019 European elections: national rules'.

Annual cost of the EP per inhabitant

The graphic above shows the annual running cost, divided by the number of inhabitants, for the European Parliament, German Bundestag, UK House of Commons, French Assemblée nationale, and US House of Representatives.¹ Caution is inevitably needed in making comparisons between the costs of parliaments, as each has its own history, traditions and organisational form: budget allocations for a given purpose in one parliament may have no parallel in another, while very different levels of resources may be dedicated to apparently similar tasks. The EP budget, for example, includes the costs of translation and interpreting into and out of 24 languages, and of operating in three centres – Brussels, Strasbourg and Luxembourg – whereas other parliaments do not have these dimensions to their work.

¹ The figures are for executed budgets in the 2015 calendar year (UK – 2014/2015 financial year, US – fiscal year 2015).

Turnout in European elections

Turnout in Member States at EP elections since 1979

For each of the eight European Parliament elections held since 1979, the table below shows the lowest turnout among all Member States, the highest in a Member State without compulsory voting, and finally the highest overall. The EU average at each election is highlighted by the line in light blue.

Trends in turnout at national and EP elections

The trend lines for turnout in four different types of election in the period since the first EP direct elections took place in 1979 show that voter turnout has been on a consistently downward path, both within the European Union and in the United States. Indeed, these trends are consistent with a general decline in average turnout at elections in most G20 democracies since 1945 – from around 80% in the immediate post-war period to around 60% today.

The graph above highlights the close relationship between the (downward) paths of turnout in EP elections and (mid-term) US Congressional elections, in both absolute values and trends. The parallel declines in turnout at Member States' parliamentary elections and at European Parliament elections demonstrate that voters treat EP elections in the same way as their national elections, but with an average turnout at national elections around 15 to 20 percentage points higher. In general, elections in which voters decide who runs the executive branch of government, as well as who controls the legislature, attract a higher turnout than other elections.

For reference, turnout in both European Parliament and national parliamentary elections is calculated as the total number of votes as a percentage of the total number of registered voters. All national elections taking place in the same year are totalled to generate an annual EU-wide percentage.

The work of the European Parliament

The European Parliament adopts its positions by voting in plenary session on legislative and budgetary texts, as well as on own-initiative reports and other resolutions. The Parliament's 20 standing committees prepare the ground, undertaking detailed consideration of draft legislation and holding public hearings on key issues. In the course of the legislative process, representatives of EP committees meet frequently with their counterparts in the Council of Ministers and the European Commission, in trilateral negotiations known as 'trilogues'.

Working with partners and citizens

The European Parliament has regular meetings with counterparts from the Member States' national parliaments, in particular at committee level. The Parliament's committees also regularly seek direct input from experts and stakeholders in public hearings, to feed their deliberations on specific topics. Citizens also have various means to make contact with the Parliament, either by visiting the institution, raising questions with the Citizens' Enquiries Unit (Ask EP), or delivering a petition for consideration by the Petitions Committee. The figures below give a flavour of these activities in the eighth term so far, from July 2014 to December 2018.

European Parliament legislative activity, 2004-2018

A core element of the European Parliament's work lies in amending and passing EU legislation. Three procedures are used, with the most common now being the 'ordinary legislative procedure' (traditionally referred to as 'co-decision'). The Parliament may also be required to give (or withhold) its consent to certain Council decisions, or may simply be consulted on certain Commission proposals. Under co-decision and consent, the EP has a right of veto over EU legal acts. The two charts below together show the rise in the use of co-decision, reflecting greater EP power from successive Treaty changes, and the growing trend for the EP and Council to agree on legislative texts at the first reading of that process.

The chart below shows the number of legislative resolutions adopted in plenary each year since 2004, including at all readings for co-decision.

The chart below shows the stage of the co-decision procedure at which the EP and Council reached agreement on individual legislative texts, in each year since 2004. As well as the total number of files agreed, the graph also shows the number agreed at first reading (the most common case).

Number and average length of co-decision procedures

The chart below shows the average duration in months of each completed ordinary legislative procedure (co-decision files), and the stage at which it was concluded, for the current parliamentary term from July 2014 to December 2018. The circles, in proportion, show the numbers of files concluded at each stage of the procedure. So far during this term, no files have gone to the conciliation/third reading stage.

Number of trilogues per year and per committee

In the eighth term so far (from July 2014 to December 2018), EP committees have participated in a total of 994 trilogue meetings with the Council and Commission. The bar graph below shows the number of trilogues held by year since the beginning of the seventh term, with a peak in 2013, notably reflecting key decisions on programmes within the 2014-20 Multiannual Financial Framework.

In 2018, out of 315 trilogues, 299 had a single committee participating, while in 16 two committees were involved in the meeting. The pie chart shows which parliamentary committees were most involved in trilogues in 2018, the fourth full year of the 2014-19 term. It highlights the eight most active committees in terms of trilogues held, as a percentage of the total.

Number of legislative and own-initiative reports

The chart below shows the number of reports adopted in each parliamentary committee between July 2014 and December 2018. 'Own initiative reports', represented by light orange bars, includes both legislative initiative and other own-initiative reports. 'Legislative reports', by blue bars, includes reports under the ordinary legislative procedure (co-decision), consent and consultation, as well as procedures relating to international agreements. 'Other reports', in dark orange, primarily relate to work under procedures specific to a given committee, such as on the budget, discharge, and questions of Members' immunity in legal proceedings. The green bars concern procedures in which committees consider whether to object to a delegated or implementing act of the Commission, based on earlier legislative acts. Forty-three reports were adopted jointly (under Rule 55) by two committees (and in one case by three committees), and are presented as a separate category.

Main governing bodies in the EP

The Bureau, the Conference of Presidents and the Conference of Committee Chairs, presented below, are complemented by other governing and coordination bodies within the Parliament, including the Conference of Delegation Chairs, the STOA Panel and the Democracy Support and Election Coordination Group.

EP Bureau

The Bureau is the body responsible for financial, organisational and administrative matters within the Parliament. It is composed of the President and the 14 Vice-Presidents, elected by an absolute majority of the votes in plenary, with the order in which they attained that majority determining their order of precedence. The five Quaestors, elected in plenary to manage administrative and financial matters directly concerning Members, also attend the Bureau in an advisory capacity, but cannot vote.

Parliamentary committees

There are 20 standing committees (and two sub-committees) in the EP, each covering a different policy area. They draw up reports for consideration in the plenary – on both legislative and non-legislative matters – and hold the executive to account. The chart below lists the committees of the EP, ordered by the number of MEPs who sit on them. It shows the chairs, elected by the members of each committee, together with their political group and nationality. The chairs of the committees meet together in the Conference of Committee Chairs, and have elected Cecilia Wikström, Chair of the Petitions (PETI) Committee, as their president for the second half of the current parliamentary term. The pie chart shows the distribution of committee chairs between the political groups, using the same colour code as before.
