

Stijn Broecke is a senior economist in the Employment, Labour and Social Affairs Directorate of the OECD. Since joining the organisation in 2012, he has worked on a range of issues, including skills, youth employment and labour market reforms. He now leads the Future of Work initiative at the OECD and is part of the team revising the OECD Jobs Strategy. Prior to joining the OECD, Stijn worked at the African Development Bank, as well as for the UK and Mozambique civil service. During that time, he worked on a wide variety of topics, including higher education, pensions, child poverty, and health policy and planning. He holds a PhD in the Economics of Education from the University of London and an MPhil from the University of Cambridge.
