Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament on the detailed provisions governing the exercise of the European Parliament's right of inquiry

*Consideration and adoption of a draft question for oral answer
Rapporteur: Ramón Jáuregui Atondo (S&D)*

At the beginning of the legislature, the Parliament confirmed the proposal it had endorsed on 16 April 2014, when it adopted the David Martin Report. However, the Council and the Commission raised some points of disagreement and as a consequence, the Parliament provided a mandate for the Rapporteur to seek a compromise with those two institutions, since their consent is indispensable for Parliament to adopt the new regulation. In an attempt to overcome the institutional deadlock, the Rapporteur approached different Presidencies but, despite the Parliament's efforts, no substantial dialogue has developed at political level. The EP considers this very damaging for the correct exercise of its right of inquiry. Therefore, the Rapporteur has proposed to launch two questions for oral answer with debate, to the Council and to the Commission, on the EP proposal.

The debate on the Future of Europe

Consideration of working documents

On 20 June and 4 September, the Committee on Constitutional Affairs endorsed the coordinators' recommendations of 20 June and 13 July 2017 to draft a series of working documents on the constitutional aspects of the Future of Europe debate. These evaluations are accompanied by the observations of the different draftspersons. On 13 November, 6 working documents were presented and discussed. Today the two remaining working documents are on the agenda:
