

Delivering scientific expertise to Parliamentary Committees – European Parliament model

Parliamentary Committees

- 20 Parliamentary committees prepare the work of the Parliament, especially (not exclusively) as co-legislator; apart from that they are together with the Council the budgetary authority;
- The EP is since the Lisbon Treaty co-legislator in most areas; the EP has also the power and responsibility to hold the other institutions accountable;
- The scrutiny of the other institutions and especially of the Commission (the Executive) is increasingly important. The committees play also a crucial role in this scrutiny;
- The committees are the motor of the parliamentary work.

Committee organisation

- Each committee has a number of Members ranging approximately between 25 -75 representing the different political groups and the different Member States.
- Each committee elects a chair and 4 vice-chairs constituting its bureau as well as a secretariat carrying out the necessary administrative and neutral content support.
- Each political group within a Committee has a coordinator; the coordinators of a Committee take the strategic decisions for the Committee.

Focus of the work of a Committee

- It prepares the position of the European Parliament on legislative proposals;
- It takes initiatives; independently or takes position on some initiatives and preparatory legislative work of the Commission;
- It scrutinizes the activities of the other institutions.

Role of Policy departments

- In order to support the committees in these mainly legislative activities, the Policy departments were established in 2004.
- The « Poldeps » are research departments which provide independent expertise and support to the legislative activities of the committees.
- They work exclusively for the Parliamentary bodies, mainly for the Committees .
- They have a distinctive role as compared to the Members Research Service (MRS) of DG EPRS which provides briefings and research to individual members. EPRS also provides a wide range of other products (see Mr Rufas Quintana's presentation).

Background and Overview

Policy departments were established in 2004 in order to bring expertise closer to the committees.

5 Policy Departments covering all policy areas:

- Economic, Scientific and Quality of Life Policies

Cooperation with Parliamentary Committees

Policy Department

Committee Secretariat

Upstream

- Policy Department helps Committee Secretariat put together suggestions for expertise for consideration by coordinators, based on discussions with secretariat, groups and Members
- Policy Department helps firm up scope of study after:
 - checking whether similar work is already in progress in other EP bodies/EU institutions

Ongoing

- Policy Departments organise delivery of expertise but consult MEP(s) appointed by Committee to follow study and secretariat administrator at every stage:
 - during preparation of specifications
 - for the kick-off/scoping meetings
 - when interim/final reports are delivered
 - for the presentation in Committee

Downstream

- Policy Departments evaluate expertise delivered, taking account of comments from secretariat administrator and MEPs
- Policy Departments contribute to committee work on implementation and monitoring, on request and through provision of analytical tools
- Policy Departments propose follow-up and organise follow-up requested

Cooperation examples

- With Committees and Secretariats:
 - Organisation of thematic meetings
 - Joint meetings of PolDeps, Secretariats, political group advisors, MEPs' assistants
 - Improved coordination of the work of Committees/Secretariats and PolDeps
 - Nomination of liaising agents
 - Project teams

Some examples of where expertise can help

- Brainstorming of different policy options available
- Trigger a legislative activity in a particular policy area
- Assisting in policy planning and policy reform
- Help clarify legal, economic and technical questions related to policy making
- Help assess transposition, implementation and enforcement of European law
- Supporting the European Parliament's position in political negotiations with the Council
- Providing background information for delegations to Member States or third countries

Impact

- Long-term planning
- Ability to respond to urgent requests
- Scrutiny
- Shift towards result-oriented and forward-looking research/policy advice (own-initiative papers, proactive analysis)
- Reinforcing role of PolDeps as think tanks
- Excellence
- Contributing to greater role of the EP in setting the political agenda

Dissemination and Visibility

- Widening the (potential) audience
- Better publicising (written) expertise:
 - Intranet/Internet
 - Mailing Lists
 - Social Media
 - Library catalogues
 - Databases
 - National and International Press
 - EP Information Offices
 - Representations of Member States

Cooperation with others

Networks outside the EP – Scientific community

- European Commission, Council, CoR, EESC, Agencies
- Agencies, European External Action Service
- Institutes/Academies/Consultancies
- Universities
- Individual experts
- International organisations (United Nations, International Labour Organisation, World Trade Organisation, etc)
- National organisations (for example political Foundations)
- Civil society organisations
- National governments/parliaments (ECPRD)
