

The Economic, Social and Environmental Council (ESEC) is a constitutional consultative assembly. It represents key economic, social and environmental fields, promoting cooperation between different socio-professional interest groups and ensuring they are part of the process of shaping and reviewing public policy.

Marie-Noëlle ORAIN

Marie-Noëlle ORAIN was a milkcow stockbreeder in a Loire-Atlantique (West of France) organic farm for more than 30 years.

Her union commitment starts in the early 1990s among the Farming Confederation. After being a militant, she is elected at the board of the Regional House of agriculture of the Chateaubriant county for the Confederation and later becomes its President.

Then, she is elected at the Loire-Atlantique Chamber of agriculture and later becomes a member of the Board of the Loire-Atlantique Farming Confederation, before eventually becoming its General Secretary.

At the Economic, Social and Environmental Council (ESEC), she is a representative for the Farming Confederation. She is the President of the Social and ecological alternatives group and sits at the Territories, food and agriculture commission.
