Nora Hiller is a Policy Analyst in the Land Use & Climate team of the Institute for European Environmental Policy (IEEP) since 2019. She is involved in a variety of projects, focusing on stakeholder engagement and policy analysis on the topics of Agriculture R&I, sustainable food systems and rural development funding mechanisms. Nora supports IEEP’s work on sustainable finance, particularly in relation to the EU Taxonomy and the science-policy interface. She holds a MSc in Environment and Development from the University of Edinburgh and a BA in International Relations from the University of Groningen. Prior to joining IEEP, Nora worked on climate finance with the Climate Support Unit of the German Agency of International Cooperation (GIZ) in Bonn.
