EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

1. Background

On 15 July 2003, having consulted the European Parliament¹, the Council adopted Regulation (EC) No 1295/2003² aimed at simplifying both the procedures for applying for and issuing Schengen visas for members of the Olympic family participating in the 2004 Olympic and Paralympic Games in Athens.

The simplification of procedures was designed to allow Greece to respect the obligations incumbent upon it, according to Article 65 of the Olympic Charter concerning the Olympic Identity and Accreditation Card. This article stipulates that this card is a document which, together with the passport or official travel document of its holder, authorises entry into the country in which the city organising the Olympic Games is situated. The members of the Olympic family may thus enter the territory of the State where the Games are held without being subject to other procedures or formalities. The specific objective of the Regulation was to ensure that this requirement was met, without challenging the essential principles and the smooth running of the Schengen area.

2. Objective and Substance of the Proposal

In his report (see above), Marjo Matikainen-Kallström asked for the implementation of Regulation 1295/2003 to be evaluated in good time so as to use this first experience to best advantage for the organisation of the Winter Olympic Games in Turin.

On the basis of a report submitted by Greece, the Commission carried out an evaluation³, from which it emerged that, in general, the Greek authorities did not come up against any major problem in applying the provisions of Regulation (EC) No. 1295/2003. This allowed the Commission to conclude that the derogation system provided for by the said Regulation constituted a flexible and efficient process, which would not compromise the level of security required in the Schengen area.

Due to the very satisfactory operation of Regulation (EC) No 1295/2003, this proposal includes exactly the same requirements and simply adapts them to the Winter Olympic and Paralympic Games in 2006.

Thus, by way of derogation from the provisions in the Schengen acquis, visa applicants are not required to present themselves in person at the consular services to submit the visa applications nor to receive their visas, nor does the visa application have to be presented using the standard form provided. Furthermore, the requirements for providing supporting documents for the visa application are less strict. The visa is not, however, delivered in the form of a sticker but appears as a specific number on the Accreditation Card for the 2006

Winter Olympic and Paralympic Games.

It should be noted that the proposed system does not in any way challenge the requirements of the Schengen acquis as regards the verification and applicable procedures in matters of public safety.

3. Remarks of the Rapporteur

Although this proposal is governed by the codecision procedure which gives Parliament an increased role compared with when the proposal for a regulation was considered for the Athens Olympic Games¹, the rapporteur is prepared to support the Commission proposal without amendment in light of the following:

1. This proposal is almost identical to the previous one. It includes exactly the same provisions and simply adapts them to the Winter Olympic and Paralympic Games in Turin.
2. When the first proposal for a regulation was considered by the European Parliament under the consultation procedure, all amendments proposed by Parliament were accepted by the Council and are now included in this proposal.
3. In accordance with the evaluation carried out by the Commission, which was based on the experience acquired during the Athens Olympic Games, the provisions of the Regulation were found to be efficient and reduced the need for issuing visas, without jeopardising public safety which needs to be guaranteed in the Schengen area.
4. To guarantee the success of the Olympic and Paralympic Games in Turin, it is essential that the Regulation is put into effect at an early date.
