- the Rights of Persons with Disabilities’ and its updates of 2016, 2017 and 2018,
- having regard to its in-depth analysis of 15 August 2016 entitled ‘The European Accessibility Act’,
 - having regard to its study of 8 May 2018 entitled ‘Transport and tourism for persons with disabilities and persons with reduced mobility’,
 - having regard to its study of 15 July 2020 entitled ‘The Post-2020 European disability strategy’,
 - having regard to Rule 54 and Rule 227(3) of its Rules of Procedure,
 - having regard to the opinions of the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs and the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs,
 - having regard to the letter from the Committee on Women’s Rights and Gender Equality,
 - having regard to the report of the Committee on Petitions (A9-0261/2021),
- A. whereas approximately 1 % of all petitions received each year by the Committee on Petitions relate to various disability issues;
- B. whereas there are approximately 87 million persons with disabilities in the EU¹⁸;
- C. whereas 37 % of people in the EU aged 15 and over have (moderate or severe) physical or sensory limitations¹⁹;
- D. whereas petitions on disability issues reveal the difficulties encountered by persons with disabilities and the fact that they face discrimination and obstacles in everyday life and that they do not enjoy the fundamental freedoms and rights laid down in the CRPD, such as access to public transport and the built environment, use of sign languages, financing and equal access to education and vocational training;
- E. whereas it is generally acknowledged that persons with disabilities continue to face multiple obstacles and discrimination in everyday life which prevent them from enjoying the fundamental freedoms and rights laid down in the applicable EU and UN legislative frameworks; whereas these include the mutual recognition of disability status between Member States – the lack of which hinders freedom of movement within the EU for persons with disabilities – access to public transport, physical, sensory and cognitive accessibility of the built environment, goods, services and programmes, use of sign languages and all other means and types of accessible communication and information, financing of and equal access to education and vocational training, access to the labour market, access to personal assistance and community inclusion, and equality in opportunity and treatment in employment and occupation;
- F. whereas all persons with disabilities have equal rights on an equal basis with others in all fields of life and are entitled to inalienable dignity, equal treatment, independent living, autonomy and full participation in society, and to expect that their contribution to the social, political and economic progress of the EU is respected and valued;

- G. whereas information stemming from petitions submitted to Parliament by persons with disabilities or on disability issues can serve as a source of information concerning gaps in the implementation of the CRPD at both national and EU level, and can help to frame legislation in all policy areas;
- H. whereas the Committee on Petitions plays a ‘protection role’ to ensure EU compliance with the CRPD within policymaking and legislative actions at EU level; whereas the Committee on Petitions has been asked to draw up an EU framework together with the European Ombudsman, the European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights, and the European Disability Forum, as adopted by the Council at its 3513th meeting held on 16 January 2017;
- I. whereas the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs has underlined the significance of petitions pertaining to the rights of persons with disabilities in the light of Parliament’s role and responsibilities set out in the EU framework for monitoring the implementation of the CRPD;
- J. whereas through its role, the Committee on Petitions has a special duty to protect the rights of persons with disabilities in the EU, with the exercise of their fundamental freedoms and rights being guaranteed by EU law and the CRPD; whereas the information available on these rights is insufficient and not accessible enough;
- K. whereas the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs highly appreciates the crucial role of the Committee on Petitions as a bridge between the people in the EU, Parliament and the other EU institutions and an important instrument for getting citizens involved in participatory democracy; whereas the right to petition Parliament is one of the fundamental rights of every individual and organisation based in the EU and is an indispensable direct source of factual information;
- L. whereas the right to petition and the petition process should be more visible and accessible to all individuals and organisations in the EU, including persons with disabilities; whereas the Committee on Petitions should ensure better visibility and sufficient information in this respect through targeted information and awareness-raising campaigns, with a special focus on vulnerable groups, including persons with disabilities; whereas Parliament has not yet developed an index of effectiveness for its petition system nor has it collected statistical data on the processing of petitions;
- M. whereas the CRPD is the first international human rights treaty to be ratified by the EU and all its Member States;
- N. whereas the Optional Protocol to the CRPD has not been ratified by the EU and five Member States;
- O. whereas a Union of Equality for all, and in all of its senses, is one of the priorities in the political guidelines of the current Commission;
- P. whereas petitions have repeatedly highlighted the limitations in terms of access to education for persons with disabilities, which lead to lower participation in educational activities than the population average and, as a consequence, to a risk of social and economic exclusion; whereas one person with disabilities out of four leaves the education system prematurely²⁰;

- Q. whereas the creation of the role of Commissioner for Equality played an instrumental role in establishing the new strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030 (European Disability Strategy 2021-2030);
- R. whereas in its resolutions, Parliament has repeatedly urged the Member States to implement appropriate policies to ensure that persons with disabilities can fully enjoy their social, political and economic rights;
- S. whereas the Member States have the responsibility to ensure that everyone in the EU has the right to an effective remedy before an independent and impartial tribunal previously established by law, and that everyone has the opportunity to be advised, defended and represented;
- T. whereas 24 Member States have comprehensively reported on the progress they have made in the implementation of the CRPD, with accessibility as one of the core principles of the convention, following inquiries sent to the Permanent Representations of all Member States by the Committee on Petitions on petition 0535/2017;
- U. whereas the proposed anti-discrimination directive, which would provide greater protection against discrimination of all kinds through a horizontal approach, still remains blocked in the Council, and whereas this has been the case for over a decade;
- V. whereas accessibility is a precondition for exercising all other rights provided for in the CRPD on an equal basis with others; whereas the Commission has proposed several actions to monitor the implementation of existing legislation on accessibility, as well as new measures to create a barrier-free EU;
- W. whereas initiatives at EU level such as the Access City Award promote the adaptation of public spaces to the needs of the elderly and persons with disabilities; whereas the competition has rewarded cities that make commitments at the level of political decision-making to be inclusive for persons with disabilities and respectful of their rights, are responsive to the needs of persons with disabilities and hold a social dialogue with organisations for persons with disabilities and the elderly; whereas the adaptation of public spaces will not only help to combat social exclusion, but will also contribute to economic growth;
- X. whereas several petitions illustrate the problems of and the need to improve access for persons with disabilities to the built environment, transport, information and communication technologies and systems (ICT), and other facilities and services provided to the public;
- Y. whereas it is indispensable for the EU institutions' to ensure their websites have the necessary technical specifications in order to be accessible to persons with disabilities, so that persons with disabilities can receive correct and direct information on all issues that concern them as citizens, with the aim of increasing the accessibility of documents, videos and websites and promoting alternative means of communication;

- Z. whereas an inter-service working group on sign language was established in Parliament in order to implement measures to fulfil the request in petition 1056/2016 to allow for the tabling of petitions in national sign languages used in the European Union;
- AA. whereas measures taken by governments during the exceptional major health crisis caused by the COVID-19 pandemic should always respect the fundamental rights and freedoms of individuals and should not discriminate against citizens with disabilities;
- AB. whereas several petitions prove that the COVID-19 pandemic has aggravated the situation of persons with disabilities, including violations of persons with disabilities' most basic human rights, such as access to healthcare, to protective measures against the spread of the disease and to education;
- AC. whereas Parliament must guarantee that the COVID-19 measures are in line with the Charter and the UN Convention on the Rights for Persons with Disabilities;
- AD. whereas due to the difficult situation during the COVID-19 crisis, institutions for persons with disabilities and older people, such as day centres or schools, have been temporarily closed on occasion; whereas in this emergency situation, the care of persons with intellectual disabilities has fallen to their family members; whereas persons with disabilities living in institutions that have remained open have been highly affected during the pandemic due to their dependence on physical contact with carers and support staff, a lack of staff, a lack of personal protective equipment and disinfectant products and, as a consequence, high rates of illness and increased numbers of deaths;
- AE. whereas confinement measures have a particularly negative impact on persons with disabilities;
- AF. whereas petitions have repeatedly highlighted the fact that employment opportunities for people with disabilities are limited; whereas the average gap between the employment rates of people with and without disabilities in the EU is 25 %²¹;
- AG. whereas employment and occupation levels for persons with disabilities are low, standing at 50.6 % compared to 74.8 % for those without disabilities; whereas, in addition, the pandemic and social and economic crisis have increased inequalities between persons with disabilities and those without disabilities;
- AH. whereas work in segregated institutions does not facilitate the integration of persons with disabilities into the open labour market;
- AI. whereas nearly one in four EU citizens surveyed reported some degree of functional limitations due to health conditions²²;

²² Eurostat, 'Functional and activity limitations statistics', accessed on 6 July 2021.

- AJ. whereas social protection and employment rights, the use of the European structural and investment funds in compliance with EU regulations and the CRPD and other issues falling within the competence of the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs are among the most common disability equality concerns voiced in the petitions received by Parliament;
- AK. whereas the Committee on Petitions receives a large number of petitions relating to Council Directive 2000/78/EC which concern the failure to implement the principle of equal treatment with regard to access to inclusive education, employment, vocational training, promotion and the working conditions of persons with disabilities; whereas the Member States and the EU have ratified the CRPD, whose Article 24 stipulates that signatories must ensure that persons with disabilities are able to access lifelong learning, adult education, vocational training, general tertiary and secondary education and free and compulsory primary education;
- AL. whereas access to quality employment, education and training, healthcare, social protection, including across borders, adequate housing, support for independent living and equal opportunities to participate in leisure activities and community life are essential to the quality of life of persons with disabilities;
- AM. whereas the recently presented European Disability Strategy 2021-2030 is a welcome step toward addressing the issues faced by persons with disabilities, but whereas these people still face obstacles and discrimination; whereas in 2019, 28.4 % of the EU population with disabilities (aged 16 or over) was at risk of social exclusion or poverty²³; whereas the European Disability Strategy 2021-2030 will have to address this state of affairs;
- AN. whereas principle 17 of the European Pillar of Social Rights states that persons with disabilities ‘have the right to income support that ensures they can live in dignity, services that enable them to participate in the labour market and in society, and a work environment adapted to their needs’;
- AO. whereas sheltered workshops should aim to ensure inclusion, rehabilitation and transition to the open labour market, but are often segregated environments in which workers with disabilities do not have employee status or enjoy labour rights, which clearly constitutes a violation of the CRPD; whereas inclusive models of supported employment can, if they are rights-based and recognised as employment, respect the rights of persons with disabilities and serve inclusion in and transition to the open labour market;
- AP. whereas the economic crisis caused by the COVID-19 pandemic poses a serious threat to European economies and the preservation of jobs; whereas people from disadvantaged groups, in particular persons with disabilities, have been particularly affected by the pandemic; whereas COVID-19 prevention measures have presented both opportunities and challenges for persons with disabilities when it comes to labour market accessibility and inclusiveness;
- AQ. whereas the EU, through the NextGenerationEU temporary recovery instrument, must support a disability-inclusive COVID-19 response and recovery; whereas civil society and voluntary organisations working in the disability sector have demonstrated their paramount importance and resilience yet again during the COVID-19 crisis;

- AR. whereas COVID-19 prevention measures have created new barriers for persons with disabilities and have exacerbated existing exclusion in all areas of the world of work; whereas persons with disabilities are more likely to lose work and have difficulties finding employment again; whereas COVID-19 has had a negative impact on accessibility and the inclusiveness of the organisation of work and work arrangements, as well as the employment and the working conditions of persons with disabilities, and has exposed many persons with disabilities to the negative effects of teleworking;
- AS. whereas in 2019, almost 18 million children in the EU (22.2 % of the child population) lived in a household at risk of poverty or social exclusion; whereas children with disabilities experience specific disadvantages that make them particularly vulnerable; whereas this underscores the importance of guaranteeing, for children in need, free and effective access to high-quality early childhood education and care, education and school-based activities, at least one healthy meal each school day and healthcare, as well as effective access to healthy nutrition and adequate housing, as stipulated in the Council recommendation establishing a European Child Guarantee;
- AT. whereas all EU Members States have ratified the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, making it binding for them, and whereas Article 3(3) of the Treaty on European Union establishes the objective for the EU to ensure children's rights are protected; whereas the Charter guarantees the protection of the rights of the child by the EU institutions and by Member States when they implement EU law; whereas Parliament adopted its resolution on the European Child Guarantee with a strong majority, demanding that access to inclusive education from early childhood to adolescence be ensured for all children, including for Romani children, children with disabilities, stateless and migrant children and those living in humanitarian emergency settings;
- AU. whereas work-related discrimination against persons with disabilities is related to a lack of inclusive education and vocational training, as well as the segregation and discrimination present in the fields of housing and healthcare, and the inaccessibility of transport and other services and products;
- AV. whereas in its resolution on equal treatment in employment and occupation in light of the UNCRPD, Parliament revealed the shortcomings of Council Directive 2000/78/EC;
- AW. whereas Directive (EU) 2019/1158 requires Member States to assess whether the conditions of access to and the detailed arrangements for parental, carers' and workers leave should be adapted to the specific needs of parents in particularly disadvantaged situations, such as parents with disabilities, adoptive, single or separated parents of children with disabilities or a long-term illness, or parents in difficult circumstances;
- AX. whereas persons with disabilities face numerous hurdles in their everyday lives, inter alia when trying to obtain personal assistance, be included in the community, find adequate and affordable accessible housing and obtain affordable healthcare and person-centred social and healthcare;

- AY. whereas unemployment and a lack of quality and sustainable jobs for persons with disabilities are the main factors contributing to a high risk of poverty, social exclusion and homelessness among persons with disabilities;
- AZ. whereas in 2017, a third of adults in the EU with disabilities lived in households whose financial resources were not sufficient to cover the usual necessary expenses; whereas in 2019, almost two thirds of the EU population with an activity limitation would have been at risk of poverty without social benefits, allowances or a pension²⁴;
- BA. whereas persons with disabilities are a diverse group and are often subject to intersectional discrimination, the cumulative effects of which have a tangible impact on employment;
- BB. whereas the progress in deinstitutionalisation is uneven across the Member States and whereas despite the introduction of relevant policies and the allocation of substantial funding in the EU, there are still one million people living in institutions; whereas several petitions on the misuse of EU funds for the deinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities have been submitted; whereas in February 2021, the European Ombudsman opened an own-initiative inquiry into the role of the Commission in ensuring that Member States use EU funds with a view to promoting independent living for persons with disabilities and older persons and transitioning away from residential care institutions; whereas Member States must speed up the process of deinstitutionalisation and the Commission must carefully monitor their progress;
- BC. whereas the collection of EU statistics on populations overlooks the nature of a person's disabilities, as well as the number of persons with disabilities living in residential care, hampering compliance with Article 31 of the CRPD;
- BD. whereas the catalogue of allowances and rights deriving from disability status varies from one Member State to another, as do the entities which define and recognise these rights;
- BE. whereas the number of persons with disabilities and persons in need of care and long-term care is expected to grow dramatically in the EU due, among other factors, to demographic challenges and the increase in chronic health conditions; whereas most long-term care is currently provided by informal, usually unpaid and predominantly female carers; whereas policies for tackling demographic challenges and responding to growing care and long-term needs should be designed in such a manner that they do not lead to increased pressure on informal carers;
- BF. whereas disabilities are often the result of an occupational injury or are acquired through a chronic condition related to occupational disease and exposure to health hazards;
- BG. whereas commitment to better inclusion and the protection of the rights of persons with disabilities should be reflected in all policy fields, including in the European Semester process;
- BH. whereas the EU and the Member States should adopt all appropriate measures for the implementation of the rights laid down in the CRPD, and modify or withdraw current measures that constitute discrimination against persons with disabilities; whereas the EU and the Member States should protect and promote the fundamental rights of persons with disabilities in all policies and programmes;

- BI. whereas 46 million women and girls in the European Union are living with disabilities²⁵;
- BJ. whereas women and girls with disabilities experience multiple intersectional discrimination and challenges arising from the intersection of gender and disability with sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, sex characteristics, country of origin, class, migration status, age or racial or ethnic origin; whereas women with disabilities from minority backgrounds are more likely to experience triple discrimination on account of their vulnerable situation; whereas discrimination creates obstacles to their participation in all areas of life, including socio-economic disadvantages, social isolation, gender-based violence, forced sterilisation and abortion, lack of access to community services, culture, sports and leisure, low-quality housing, institutionalisation and inadequate healthcare; whereas these obstacles diminish the probability of fully participating in, actively engaging in and contributing to society, including in education and the labour market;
- BK. whereas in the European Union, 20.6 % of women with disabilities are in full-time employment compared with 28.5 % of men with disabilities²⁶; whereas figures show that, on average, 29.5 % of women with disabilities in the EU are at risk of falling victim to poverty and social exclusion, compared with 27.5 % of men with disabilities²⁷;
- BL. whereas the CRPD notes that women and girls with disabilities are at greater risk of violence both within and outside the home; whereas some Member States have not yet ratified the Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence (the Istanbul Convention); whereas extending areas of crime to encompass specific forms of gender-based violence in accordance with Article 83(1) of the TFEU will provide greater protection for women and girls with disabilities;

Governance and implementation

1. Stresses the need to raise awareness at all levels of the rights of persons with disabilities enshrined in the CRPD in order to protect their rights and dignity, and to promote fruitful cooperation and the exchange of good practices between Member States; highlights the need for commonly accepted definitions of disability, deinstitutionalisation, living in the community, independent living and inclusive education; encourages the Member States to strengthen coordination mechanisms;
2. Stresses that Member States should step up their efforts to provide support for persons with disabilities in the following priority areas: health, education, accessibility, employment and working conditions, independent living, coordination, living conditions, social protection and awareness-raising;

3. Calls on all Member States that have not yet ratified the Optional Protocol to the CRPD to do so without further delay, and for the EU to fully ratify it; calls on the Council to take the necessary steps to ensure the accession of the EU to the Optional Protocol;
4. Considers the Optional Protocol to be an indivisible part of the CRPD; points to the fact that the Optional Protocol provides citizens with a forum to communicate alleged violations of the provisions of the convention by a State Party, and allows the CRPD Committee to initiate confidential inquiries when they receive information indicating that a State Party has committed a grave or systematic violation;
5. Calls on the Commission to conduct a comprehensive and cross-cutting review of EU legislation and funding programmes with a view to complying fully with the CRPD by constructively involving disability organisations and the members of the EU framework for monitoring the implementation of the CRPD;
6. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to take into account the diversity and heterogeneity of persons with disabilities when designing and implementing policies and measures;
7. Education

103. Welcomes the fact that Member States are willing to implement inclusive educational policies; calls on the Member States to further increase their education systems' capacity to provide high-quality accessible education for all learners by promoting specific measures and personalised support, such as accessible and tailored curricula and learning materials, accessible ICTs and appropriate digital education calls on the Commission to strengthen the role of the Child Guarantee, giving consideration to an accessible school award scheme, in ensuring the equal treatment of children with disabilities; calls on the Commission and the Member States to invest in training professionals regarding the needs of persons with disabilities; reiterates that the implementation and allocation of the relevant EU funding programmes should contribute to the transition towards inclusive education; stresses that persons with disabilities should be guaranteed access to education, including during crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic, and that Member States should tackle all forms of discrimination and exclusion in this area; stresses the need to increase the participation of young people with disabilities in training, while taking into account their needs, which would provide them with better access to the labour market; notes the benefits for children from linguistic minorities and with special educational needs of learning in their mother tongue during early years education in cases where it is difficult for them to use language and communicate; calls on the Member States to ensure access to minority language education for children with special educational needs;
104. Points out that inclusive education and vocational training programmes are two of the key prerequisites for a more inclusive labour market; calls on the Commission to ensure that the upcoming EU approach to micro-credentials for lifelong learning and employability is accessible and inclusive and reflects on how to improve the realisation of the right to work of persons with disabilities; calls on the Member States to take advantage of the opportunities that the improved Youth Guarantee provides for employment, education, traineeships or apprenticeships for young persons with disabilities, to ensure equal access for persons with disabilities and to introduce tailor-made policies;
105. Stresses the importance of early, individualised and comprehensive support for children with disabilities, their parents and carers; calls on the Member States to pay special attention to children with disabilities and special educational needs;
106. Draws attention to the importance of early childhood intervention and to the fact that children with disabilities must participate and be included in society from the very early stages of their lives; points out the need to increase the funding opportunities for inclusive education, when and where possible and advisable, both for the promotion of inclusive education's impact on children with or without disabilities as well as for the funding of research in inclusive education; considers it necessary to encourage the use of new technologies, including ICT, mobility support devices, ancillary devices and technologies that are suitable for people with disabilities; stresses that education is central to individual development, and that accessible learning environments for persons with disabilities offer them the possibility to fully contribute to all aspects of society;

107. Stresses that people with disabilities must be fully integrated into the labour market through the promotion of inclusive education and flexible forms of employment that can meet their needs (such as teleworking or smart working) and through the full involvement of associations for people with disabilities in developing inclusive strategies;
108. Points out that persons with disabilities often have high levels of skills and qualifications that are undervalued; notes that this prevents them from realising their potential and deprives society of the social and economic value of their inclusion;
109. Strongly believes that Member States should provide adequate support to children with disabilities to enable public education to become the backbone of the individualised pedagogical paradigm;
110. Recognises the value of school and sport as crucial in the growth and development of children with disabilities, especially those with autism; regrets that, during the pandemic, distance learning has deprived them of these fundamental activities; hopes that their education will be prioritised in the reopening policies in the Member States;
111. Proposes the creation of projects to raise awareness of the needs of persons with disabilities, by positively using the power of cultural tools, such as through the promotion of cultural events, as part of a broader educational strategy to promote and protect the rights of persons with disabilities;
112. Calls on the Member States to comply with the guidelines issued by the Commission in its communication on achieving a European Education Area by 2025 in relation to the duty of governments to promote mainstreaming in all education and training sectors, in accordance with the UN commitments under the CRPD; calls for the incorporation of an inclusive arrangements system in national, European and regional education policies to facilitate the educational mainstreaming of students with disabilities, in order to avoid any type of discrimination;

Protecting the rights of women with disabilities

113. Welcomes the European Disability Strategy 2021-2030 and its references to the specific challenges faced by women and girls with disabilities; calls for the intersection of gender and disability to be mainstreamed in all EU policies, programmes, initiatives, and in Member States' national action plans; calls for optimising the use of the existing and future EU funding instruments to promote accessibility and non-discrimination;
114. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to ensure the full development, advancement and empowerment of women with disabilities and to promote their participation in public decision-making; points out that adequate measures should be put in place to ensure that their perspectives are fully taken into account and that, together with disability-specific consultative bodies, the participation of organisations representing women with disabilities is promoted;
115. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to urgently address the gender-based violence that women and girls with disabilities face to a disproportionate degree, via the Istanbul Convention and by extending the areas of crime to encompass specific forms of gender-based violence in accordance with Article 83(1) of the TFEU; calls on the Commission to use this as a legal basis to propose binding measures and a holistic EU framework directive to prevent and combat all forms of gender-based violence; calls on the Commission to ensure that the needs of women with disabilities are included in initiatives that provide support to victims through the Gender Equality Strategy and the Victims' Rights Strategy, and to ensure that support for victims is designed in accordance with the principle of accessibility;

116. Regrets the gender-based discrimination that women and girls with both physical and cognitive disabilities experience within the medical sector; considers that women and girls with disabilities must have full and equal access to medical treatments that meet their particular needs, via disability-specific healthcare and mainstream services; calls on the Member States to ensure further education of medical professionals with regard to the specific needs of women and girls with disabilities, and to ensure that women and girls with disabilities receive all appropriate information to enable them to freely take decisions regarding their health;
117. Calls for universal respect for, and access to, sexual and reproductive health and rights; regrets the backlash against women's sexual and reproductive health and rights in some countries, which is particularly harmful for women and girls with disabilities, who face additional obstacles in accessing healthcare; emphasises the importance of Member States taking all necessary measures to combat forced sterilisation; urges the Member States to ensure public investment to guarantee full access to sexual and reproductive health and rights for women and girls with disabilities; regrets that sexuality education is often denied to girls with disabilities; urges the Member States to ensure comprehensive and inclusive education on sexuality and relationships;
118. Calls on the Member States to guarantee an accessible, non-stereotyped education system, with inclusive education measures, which prepare women and girls with disabilities for the labour market, with a specific focus on digital capabilities and lifelong learning, and to guarantee that women and girls with disabilities can choose their areas of study, to enable them to pursue jobs that they want to do and in which they can use their full potential, and in which they are not limited by inaccessibility, prejudice or stereotypes; acknowledges the link between education and subsequent employment; stresses the need for full access to education in order to combat the employment gap;
119. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to address the employment gap faced by women with disabilities, notably by tackling gender stereotypes, strengthening their participation in the digital economy, increasing their representation in education, training and employment in STEM subjects and occupations, and combating deterrents to work such as sexual harassment; calls on the Commission and the Member States to take concrete measures to ensure that women with disabilities participate in decision-making and receive equal pay for equal work via binding pay transparency measures, to combat their high risk of in-work poverty and to adjust labour regulations such as flexible working arrangements and parental leave to their specific needs; calls on the Commission and the Member States to support social economy business models and initiatives aimed at improving the social and labour inclusion of women with disabilities through the action plan on the social economy;

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

Introduction

Up to one quarter of the European electorate declare some degree of impairment or disability. Over a decade ago, the EU acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD), and the Convention came into force in the EU on 23 January 2011. This Convention is the first binding human rights instrument to specifically address disability with its aim to ‘promote, protect and ensure the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by all persons with disabilities, and to promote respect for their inherent dignity’. The EU and all its Member States are party to the CRPD, with Ireland being the final Member State to ratify it in 2018. Under this Convention, the EU is obliged to promote, protect and monitor equal rights for persons with disabilities in all aspects of implementation.

Based on the results of the previous European Disability Strategy 2010-2020, in March 2021 the European Commission adopted the New Strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030. The New Disability Strategy aims to improve the lives of persons with disabilities in a barrier-free Europe and to promote social and economic inclusion and participation of persons with disability in society, free from discrimination and in full respect of their rights on equal basis with others. It is important to mention that the role of the Commissioner for Equality played an instrumental role in establishing the new Strategy for the Rights of Persons with Disabilities 2021-2030.

Through its petition process, Parliament’s Committee on Petitions (PETI) has a direct role to play in protecting disability rights in the EU.

The submission rates of petitions relating to disability rights have remained relatively steady over the last few years: in 2018, 23 petitions were submitted (1.2 %); in 2019, 12 petitions were submitted (0.6 %); and in 2020, 20 petitions were submitted (1.2 %). The most common disability equality concerns of petitioners are with accessibility and social protection, mutual recognition of disability in the Member States, as well as inclusive education and employment rights. The petitions received by the European Parliament demonstrate the obstacles that persons with disabilities face in various fields, such as access to public transport, built environment, use of sign languages, financing or access to education.

Despite disability issues forming a small proportion of petition submissions, they have a strong significance for Parliament’s responsibility to promote, monitor and protect disability rights and equality under international law. PETI plays a ‘protection role’ to ensure EU compliance with the CRPD within the policymaking and legislative actions at EU-level. This role is an important institutional responsibility given to the committee in the EU framework.

Article 33(2) CRPD requires States Parties to establish a framework to promote, protect and monitor implementation of this Convention. The EU Framework is made up of the European Parliament, the European Ombudsman, the EU Agency for Fundamental Rights and the European Disability Forum. This Framework complements national monitoring frameworks.

Disability issues are regularly debated in plenary, and PETI hosts an annual workshop or hearing on disability rights each year. The most recent one was held on 28 October 2020. The Ombudsman, the European Agency for Fundamental Rights, the Commission, the European Disability Forum, NGOs and experts actively participate at these workshops/hearings.

The objectives of this report include, and are not limited to, the following:

- Raise awareness of the issues faced by people with disabilities;
- Urge EU Member States to ensure that existing EU laws protecting, promoting and monitoring disability rights are adequately enforced;
- Urge the Commission to step up its monitoring of the implementation of EU law and to improve existing EU law where it is established that it is not adequate to protect the rights of persons with disabilities;

Findings of the report:

CRPD

The report emphasises the importance of raising awareness of the rights enshrined in the CRPD for persons with disabilities, and stresses the need to promote cooperation and exchange of good practices between Member States. It encourages the consultation and involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities in every phase leading to the adoption of measures, so as to ensure that such measures do not violate the fundamental rights of persons with disabilities.

Focal points

Article 33(1) UNCPRD requires that States Parties designate focal points for matters relating to the implementation on the CRPD. As they have not yet been designated in all Member States, the report urges that they be appointed without delay.

Article 33(2) and 33(3) CRPD require States Parties to designate or establish an independent monitoring mechanism to promote, protect and monitor implementation of the Convention, and that civil society be involved and have the opportunity to participate fully in the monitoring process.

For example, in Bulgaria, the focal point is the Integration of People with Disabilities Department, in the Ministry of Labour and Social Policy. In its Concluding Observations 2018, the CRPD Committee raised concerns that Bulgaria had not yet designated an independent monitoring mechanism in accordance with Articles 33(2) and 33(3) CRPD. The Committee recommended that Bulgaria designate such a mechanism, and that Bulgaria should ensure the full and active participation of persons with disabilities in such independent monitoring mechanisms¹.

Optional Protocol

Through the Optional Protocol, individuals can submit communications to the CRPD Committee on alleged violations of their fundamentals by a State Party to the CRPD. The CRPD Committee can then initiate confidential inquiries on the foot of this communication. This Optional Protocol has been ratified by most of the EU Member States, but has not been ratified by five Member States (Bulgaria, Ireland, the Netherlands, Poland, and Portugal), nor has it been ratified by the EU itself. The main concerns surrounding ratification by the EU are the possible repercussions of this ratification in the national legal orders of the Member States that have not yet ratified the Optional Protocol. In particular, some Member States are concerned that if the CPRD Committee were to issue an unfavourable opinion against the EU, all its Member States, including those that explicitly chose not to ratify the Optional Protocol domestically, would be forced to abide by the Committee's interpretation. However, the most obvious concern presented by the delayed ratification by the EU is the legal uncertainty for citizens in those member States that did ratify the Optional Protocol: some rights (the ones within the Member State's competence) would be justiciable before the CRPD Committee, whereas the others (the ones within the shared or exclusive EU competences), would not. The resistance to the EU ratification of the Optional Protocol will weaken when or if all the remaining EU Member States ratify the Optional Protocol domestically and thus align their own obligations under the Convention to those of the EU.

Access to justice

The report encourages the Commission to work with the CJEU on communication and accessibility strategies to ensure that persons with disabilities have the ability to access the EU justice system.

Mutual recognition of disability status

Currently, there is no mutual recognition of the disability status between EU Member States, which creates obstacles for persons with disabilities when moving to another Member State for work, studies or other reason. The Strategy for the Rights of Persons with Disabilities 2021-2030 proposes an EU-wide Disability Card by end of 2023 in order to scale up the pilot project of the European Disability Card and the European parking card for persons with disabilities. The European Disability Card will be very important instrument to help persons with disabilities to exercise their right to free movement in a barrier-free Europe, therefore it should be mandatory in all Member States;

Rail passenger rights and mobility

The report welcomes the recast of the rail passengers rights regulation, in particular the phasing out of current exemptions for Member States, and the reduction of the advance notice to be given by persons with disabilities or reduced mobility. It encourages Member States to provide for shorter notification periods to allow persons with disabilities or reduced mobility to travel with even greater spontaneity and ease.

In response to Petition No 0535/2017, the Committee on Petitions decided in its meeting of 24 April 2018 to ask the Member States on the progress made on the implementation of the CRPD. To date, 24 Member States have submitted responses, and four responses are outstanding (Denmark, Italy, Spain, and Cyprus). The responses describe, among other things, the designated focal points, the implementing and monitoring frameworks, and various national plans that aim to promote and protect the rights of persons with disabilities.

Regulation (EC) No 1371/2007 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 23 October 2007 on rail passengers' rights and obligations provided Member States with the option to grant national exemptions from the application of the provisions of the Regulation to domestic rail passenger services. Latvia and Romania granted the most national exemptions². Petition No 0857/2016 complained about the situation in Romania specifically, with the petitioner indicating that the domestic railway system in Romania is not adapted to the needs of persons with disabilities or reduced mobility.

Accessibility

Regarding accessibility, Directive (EU) 2019/882 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 17 April 2019 on the accessibility requirements for products and services ('the European Accessibility Act') was adopted to harmonise provisions relating to accessibility requirements for certain products and services. Harmonisation leads to an elimination of barriers in the internal market and an increase of accessible products and services, thus leading to a more inclusive society and facilitating independent living for persons with disabilities. While this is a step in the right direction, civil society organisations have expressed disappointment that the Directive did not go further, as accessibility to the built environment and an obligation to comply in relation to public procurement and the use of EU funds, were omitted from the scope of the Directive.

Considering these omissions, the report calls on the Council to break its deadlock and to speed up the adoption of the EU anti-discrimination directive. It is highlighted that no undue restriction on the scope of this Directive should be accepted, so as to avoid the complaints received regarding the European Accessibility Act. It is regretted that, in particular, access to the built environment did not come within the scope of the Accessibility Act, and the Commission is called on to adopt a robust EU framework for an accessible and inclusive environment.

It is recalled that Member States are to ensure the accessibility of public sector bodies' websites and mobile applications in line with Directive (EU) 2016/2102.

Furthermore, the report follows up on petition 1056/2016 on behalf of the European Union of the Deaf that requests Parliament to allow for the tabling of petitions in national sign languages used in the EU. An inter-service working group on sign language is working on the necessary measures within Parliament to implement the request by the petitioner and to make the fundamental right to petition more accessible for sign language users.

Public procurement

The report recalls that public procurement should be carried out in a way that respects the fundamental rights of the beneficiaries. It is highlighted that Member States are required to comply with the CRPD when implementing public procurement legislation.

Inclusive education

Inclusive educational policies implemented in the Member States are welcomed, but the report encourages them to take further steps to increase the education systems' capacity to provide high-quality education for all learners, since inclusive education creates the foundation for an inclusive labour market

Easy-to-read version

The rapporteur wanted to ensure that this report is accessible for persons with disabilities. For this reason, you will find below an easy-to-read version of the report. The rapporteur would like to express his thanks and appreciation to Inclusion Europe and Autism Europe for having prepared the easy-to-read version of the report.

This document is a report of the European Parliament.

The European Parliament makes laws for the people of the European Union.

Laws are rules that we must follow.

The European Union is a group of 27 countries. We call it the EU.

Countries have joined to be stronger politically and economically.

The EU makes laws for the people of those countries.

This report is about petitions to help persons with disabilities.

Petitions are claims by the people to the Committee on Petitions.

The Committee on Petitions is part of the European Parliament.

The Committee on Petitions has direct contact with the people of the EU.

Every person of the EU whose rights are not respected can make a petition to the Committee on Petitions.

Rights are what we can do. Too many persons with disabilities face barriers:

- to education
- to finding jobs
- at work
- travelling to other countries
- to taking public transport
- to information
- to help and support

We want to change this:

We want people with disabilities to have the same rights in all areas of life, without discrimination.

So countries of the EU must agree on the same disability status between each other.

Children with disabilities must be able to go to the same school as others in the EU.

Travelling to another country in the EU must be possible with no barriers.

Travelling by public transport must be possible with no barriers in every country in the EU.

Going into a building must be possible with no barriers in every country in the EU.

People who make petitions must have the right to make a petition in sign language.

We want persons with disabilities to be accepted and appreciated.

That means we are all equal and at the same time everyone is special.

Everyone has talents. Talents are useful in all areas of life with no barriers in Europe.

OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON EMPLOYMENT AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS

for the Committee on Petitions

on the protection of persons with disabilities through petitions: lessons learnt
(2020/2209(INI))

Rapporteur for opinion: Radan Kanev

SUGGESTIONS

The Committee on Employment and Social Affairs calls on the Committee on Petitions, as the committee responsible, to incorporate the following suggestions into its motion for a resolution:

- A. whereas the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs highly appreciates the crucial role of the Committee on Petitions as a bridge between the EU's citizens, Parliament and the other EU institutions and an important instrument for getting citizens involved in participatory democracy; whereas the right to petition Parliament is one of the fundamental rights of every individual and organisation based in the EU and is an indispensable direct source of factual information;
- B. whereas through its role, the Committee on Petitions has a special duty to protect the rights of persons with disabilities in the EU, with the exercise of their fundamental freedoms and rights being guaranteed by EU law and the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UN CRPD); whereas the information available on these rights is insufficient and not accessible enough;
- C. whereas the right to petition and the petition process should be more visible and accessible to all individuals and organisations in the EU, including persons with disabilities; whereas the Committee on Petitions should ensure better visibility and sufficient information in this respect through targeted information and awareness-raising campaigns, with a special focus on vulnerable groups, including persons with disabilities; whereas Parliament has not yet developed an index of effectiveness for its petition system nor has it collected statistical data on the processing of petitions;
- D. whereas there are approximately 87 million persons with disabilities in the EU¹; whereas the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs has underlined the significance of petitions pertaining to the rights of persons with disabilities in the light of Parliament's role and responsibilities set out in the EU framework for monitoring the implementation of the UN CRPD;
- E. whereas nearly one in four EU citizens surveyed reported some degree of functional limitations due to health conditions²;

- F. whereas approximately 1 % of all petitions received each year by the Committee on Petitions relate to a variety of problems and difficulties persons with disabilities face in everyday life; whereas social protection and employment rights, the use of the European Structural and Investment Funds in compliance with EU regulations and the UN CRPD, and other issues falling within the competence of the Committee on Employment and Social Affairs, are among the most common disability equality concerns voiced in the petitions received by Parliament;
- G. whereas the Committee on Petitions receives a large number of petitions relating to Council Directive 2000/78/EC which concern the failure to implement the principle of equal treatment with regard to access to inclusive education, employment, vocational training, promotion and the working conditions of persons with disabilities; whereas the Member States and the EU have ratified the UN CRPD, whose Article 24 stipulates that signatories must ensure that persons with disabilities are able to access lifelong learning, adult education, vocational training, general tertiary and secondary education and free and compulsory primary education;
- H. whereas all EU Members States have ratified the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, making it binding for them, and whereas Article 3(3) of the Treaty on European Union establishes the objective for the EU to ensure children's rights are protected; whereas the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union guarantees the protection of the rights of the child by the EU institutions and by Member States when they implement EU law; whereas Parliament adopted its resolution on a European Child Guarantee with a strong majority, demanding that access to inclusive education from early childhood to adolescence be ensured for all children, including for Romani children, children with disabilities, stateless and migrant children and those living in humanitarian emergency settings;
- I. whereas access to quality employment, education and training, healthcare, social protection, including across borders, adequate housing and support for independent living and equal opportunities to participate in leisure activities and community life are essential to the quality of life of persons with disabilities;
- J. whereas it is generally acknowledged that persons with disabilities continue to face multiple obstacles and discrimination in everyday life which prevent them from enjoying the fundamental freedoms and rights laid down in the applicable EU and UN legislative frameworks; whereas these include the mutual recognition of disability status between Member States – the lack of which hinders freedom of movement within the EU for persons with disabilities – access to public transport, physical, sensory and cognitive accessibility of the built environment, goods, services and programmes, use of sign languages and all other means and formats of accessible communication and information, financing of and equal access to education and vocational training, access to the labour market, access to personal assistance and community inclusion, and equality in opportunity and treatment in employment and occupation;
- K. whereas the recently presented strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030 is a welcome step toward addressing the issues faced by persons with disabilities,

but whereas these people still face obstacles and discrimination; whereas in 2019, 28.4 % of the EU population with disabilities (aged 16 or over) was at risk of social exclusion or poverty³; whereas the 2021-2030 strategy will have to address this state of affairs;

- L. whereas principle 17 of the European Pillar of Social Rights states that persons with disabilities have the right to income support that ensures they can live in dignity, services that enable them to participate in the labour market and in society, and a work environment adapted to their needs;
- M. whereas sheltered workshops should aim to ensure inclusion, rehabilitation and transition to the open labour market, but are often segregated environments in which workers with disabilities do not have employee status or enjoy labour rights, which clearly constitutes a violation of the UN CRPD; whereas inclusive models of supported employment can, if they are rights-based and recognised as employment, respect the rights of persons with disabilities and serve inclusion in and transition to the open labour market;
- N. whereas the average gap between the employment rates of persons with and without disabilities in the EU is 25 %⁴; whereas the employment rates of persons with disabilities, especially women, young people with disabilities and those with primary education only, remain unacceptably low;
- O. whereas the economic crisis caused by the COVID-19 pandemic poses a serious threat to European economies and the preservation of jobs; whereas people from disadvantaged groups, in particular persons with disabilities, have been particularly affected by the pandemic; whereas COVID-19 prevention measures have presented both opportunities and challenges for persons with disabilities when it comes to labour market accessibility and inclusiveness;
- P. whereas the EU, through NextGenerationEU, must support a disability-inclusive COVID-19 response and recovery; whereas civil society and voluntary organisations working in the disability sector have demonstrated their paramount importance and resilience yet again during the COVID-19 crisis;
- Q. whereas in 2019, almost 18 million children in the EU (22.2 % of the child population) lived in households at risk of poverty or social exclusion; whereas children with disabilities experience specific disadvantages that make them particularly vulnerable; whereas this underscores the importance of guaranteeing, for children in need, free and effective access to high-quality early childhood education and care, education and school-based activities, at least one healthy meal each school day and healthcare, as well as effective access to healthy nutrition and adequate housing, as stipulated in the Council recommendation establishing a European Child Guarantee;
- R. whereas work-related discrimination against persons with disabilities is related to a lack of inclusive education and vocational training, as well as the segregation and discrimination present in the fields of housing and healthcare, and the lack of accessibility of transport and other services and products;

- S. whereas in its resolution on equal treatment in employment and occupation in light of the UN CRPD, Parliament revealed the shortcomings of Council Directive 2000/78/EC establishing a general framework for equal treatment in employment and occupation;
- T. whereas Directive (EU) 2019/1158 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2019 on work-life balance for parents and carers and repealing Council Directive 2010/18/EU requires Member States to assess whether the conditions of access to and the detailed arrangements for parental, carers' and workers leave should be adapted to the specific needs of parents in particularly disadvantaged situations, such as parents with disabilities, adoptive, single or separated parents of children with disabilities or a long-term illness, or parents in difficult circumstances;
- U. whereas persons with disabilities face numerous hurdles in their everyday lives, inter alia when trying to obtain personal assistance, be included in the community, find adequate and affordable accessible housing and obtain affordable healthcare and person-centred social and healthcare;
- V. whereas unemployment and a lack of quality and sustainable jobs for persons with disabilities are the main factors contributing to a high risk of poverty, social exclusion and homelessness among persons with disabilities;
- W. whereas in 2017, a third of adults in the EU with disabilities lived in households whose financial resources were not sufficient to cover the usual necessary expenses; whereas in 2019, almost two thirds of the EU population with an activity limitation would have been at risk of poverty without social benefits, allowances or a pension⁵;
- X. whereas persons with disabilities are a diverse group and are often subject to intersectional discrimination, the cumulative effects of which have a tangible impact on employment;
- Y. whereas the progress in deinstitutionalisation is uneven across the Member States and whereas despite the introduction of relevant policies and the allocation of substantial funding in the EU, there are still one million people living in institutions; whereas several petitions on the misuse of EU funds for the deinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities have been submitted; whereas in February 2021, the European Ombudsman opened an own-initiative inquiry into the role of the Commission in ensuring that Member States use EU funds with a view to promoting independent living for persons with disabilities and older persons and transitioning away from residential care institutions; whereas Member States must speed up the process of deinstitutionalisation and the Commission must carefully monitor their progress;
- Z. whereas persons with disabilities in residential care institutions have been among the most vulnerable and negatively affected by COVID-19 pandemic restrictions owing to the temporary closure of day centres and schools, which has aggravated existing inequalities and the risk of isolation and social exclusion among persons with disabilities; whereas the care of persons with intellectual disabilities has fallen to their family members; whereas petitioners have highlighted the difficult health situations and insufficient sanitary measures in some of the institutions that remained open, and consequently, the high rates of illness and death in these institutions;

- AA. whereas the collection of EU statistics on populations overlooks the nature of a person's disabilities, as well as the number of persons with disabilities living in residential care, hampering compliance with Article 31 of the UN CRPD;
 - AB. whereas there are various groups of persons with disabilities and whereas some of them, for example women, face additional difficulties and multiple discrimination; whereas different forms of discrimination can lead to social isolation and solitude, psychological trauma and depression;
 - AC. whereas COVID-19 prevention measures have created new barriers for persons with disabilities and have exacerbated existing exclusion in all areas of the world of work; whereas persons with disabilities are more likely to lose work and have difficulties finding employment again; whereas COVID-19 has had a negative impact on accessibility and the inclusiveness of the organisation of work and work arrangements, as well as the employment and the working conditions of persons with disabilities, and has exposed many persons with disabilities to the negative effects of teleworking;
 - AD. whereas the catalogue of allowances and rights deriving from disability status varies from one Member State to another, as do the entities which define and recognise these rights;
 - AE. whereas the number of persons with disabilities and persons in need of care and long-term care is expected to grow dramatically in the EU due, among other factors, to demographic challenges and the increase in chronic health conditions; whereas most long-term care is currently provided by informal, usually unpaid and predominantly female carers; whereas policies for tackling demographic challenges and responding to growing care and long-term needs should be designed in such a manner that they do not lead to increased pressure on informal carers;
 - AF. whereas disabilities are often the result of an occupational injury or are acquired through a chronic condition related to occupational disease and exposure to health hazards;
 - AG. whereas commitment to better inclusion and the protection of the rights of persons with disabilities should be reflected in all policy fields, including in the European Semester process;
1. Calls on the Commission to ensure that the EU and the Member States fully comply with all relevant EU and UN obligations on the rights of persons with disabilities, in particular the UN CRPD and the UN CRPD Committee's general comments to the convention, and with the relevant EU measures and funding rules, and to provide support to them and their families and carers and enable exchanges of best practices in this area; calls, in this regard, on the Commission to ensure that the use of EU funds upholds the rights of persons with disabilities and calls on the European Court of Auditors to assess the performance of EU programmes, with a particular emphasis on education and employment programmes;
 2. Welcomes the plans of the Commission to examine the functioning of the EU framework for monitoring the implementation of the UN CRPD in 2022 and propose actions on this basis; calls on the Commission to strengthen the EU framework and its independence, above all by ensuring greater involvement and participation of experts, non-governmental organisations, social partners and particularly persons with disabilities, without discrimination based on the type of disability or any other personal circumstance; underlines the need for the EU framework to be based on detailed, up-to-date, quality disaggregated data according to the nature of a person's disability, building on the work of the Washington Group on Disability Statistics;

3. Calls on the EU institutions and the Member States to reaffirm their commitment to realising inclusive equality for persons with disabilities and to fully implement the UN CRPD, including its Article 27 on work and employment;
4. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to set clear objectives to improve the living and working conditions of persons with disabilities, while respecting the principles of accessibility and non-discrimination and investing in equal opportunities and the participation of persons with disabilities in all areas of life;
5. Calls on the EU and the Member States that have not yet done so to ratify the Optional Protocol to the UN CRPD;
6. Points out that the Committee on Petitions plays a specific protection role in ensuring that the EU complies with the UN CRPD when taking policymaking and legislative action; notes that in the context of that responsibility, the committee handles petitions on disability issues, organises debates, thematic workshops and public hearings on the subject, drafts resolutions and reports and carries out field missions;
7. Stresses that in order to have effective access to justice through petitions to Parliament, persons with disabilities should have access to the necessary support and assistance in drafting and submitting petitions that fulfil the admissibility criteria; calls for better visibility of the petitions mechanism through more awareness-raising, as well as the involvement and participation of persons with disabilities or their representatives in the consideration of petitions;
8. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to promote and support social enterprises focusing on the employment of persons with disabilities, as they are a lever to boost the creation of decent jobs;
9. Urges the EU institutions to improve the level and quality of accessibility in all of their buildings and remove the existing barriers to their websites, debates and documentation, i.e. making the information produced accessible, by, for example, providing translation into the sign languages of the different Member States, documents in Braille and documents in easy language;
10. Recalls that Parliament has asked the Member States to examine the possibility of introducing quotas for persons with disabilities to foster inclusive workplaces; invites the Member States and the EU institutions to lead by example by employing them in their administrations;
11. Urges the Member States to develop national action plans that address the shortcomings in access to public safety-related information, distance and online learning, personal assistance, care and support services for people with disabilities;

12. Calls on the Member States to take an intersectional approach, especially in their policies and measures, to creating inclusive employment; regrets that multiple and intersectional discrimination is insufficiently addressed in the strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030; calls, therefore, on the Commission to place special emphasis on intersectionality in the implementation of the strategy and to set clear, measurable and ambitious targets relating to workplace diversity that reflect the heterogeneity of persons with disabilities, in order to address multiple and intersectional discrimination; stresses the importance of monitoring the efficiency of the strategy with the involvement of persons with disabilities and the organisations that represent them;
13. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to ensure the cognitive, sensory and physical accessibility of EU initiatives on the digitalisation of the labour market;
14. Encourages the Member States to give persons with significant and severe disabilities early access to public pension schemes to combat the risk of poverty and social exclusion in old age;
15. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to establish a common definition of disability in line with the concluding observations of the UN CRPD Committee on the initial report of the European Union adopted in 2015, and to ensure mutual recognition of disability status across the Member States, so as to ensure the free movement of persons with disabilities and the proper exercise and recognition of their EU citizenship rights;
16. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to better acknowledge the importance of accessible and quality support services and systems for independent living; stresses the need to promote strategies and standards for personalised quality support for dependent persons with disabilities and their carers, including improved social protection and various forms of support for informal carers; calls on the Commission to present a strategic EU care agenda as a further step forward in qualitatively empowering the healthcare sector in the EU, including personal and household service workers; reiterates that the care agenda also needs to reflect the situation of the 100 million informal carers in the EU, who provide 80 % of long-term care but whose work mostly goes unrecognised;
17. Calls on the Member States to address the underdevelopment and underfunding of public employment services with a view to improving the employment rate of persons with disabilities; urges the Member States to strengthen the links between public employment services and recruitment agencies;
18. Highlights the positive role played by UN-CRPD-compliant sheltered workplaces in the transition of persons with disabilities to the open labour market;
19. Urges the Member States to support rights-based, inclusive and decent individual placement and support ('supported employment') models as a means for persons with disabilities, when possible, to make the transition to the open labour market;
20. Welcomes the fact that as part of the strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030, an EU-wide disability card that will facilitate the mutual recognition of disability status in more areas, such as labour mobility and benefits related to conditions of service provision, will be available by the end of 2023; calls on the Commission and the Member States to be ambitious regarding the scope of the entitlements card users will have and ensure proper implementation by all the Member States by way of binding EU legislation if necessary;

21. Notes that in some Member States where a disability card has already been introduced, there have been reports of misuse, sometimes leading to negative consequences for people who are truly eligible; therefore stresses the need to raise awareness at all levels and take measures to prevent misuse of the new EU-wide disability card;
22. Calls on the Member States to carry out national disability awareness-raising campaigns promoting the UN CRPD and the EU strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030 that are accessible for all and involve persons with disabilities and the family members and organisations that represent them; calls on the Member States to adopt ambitious timelines on the implementation of the strategy; calls on the Commission to develop a set of detailed indicators in the forthcoming delegated act on the revised social scoreboard to measure the progress toward the goals and objectives of the strategy and to ensure compliance by all those involved with the commitments outlined in these documents;
23. Underlines the importance of the active involvement and participation of persons with disabilities, the organisations that represent them, social partners and all other relevant stakeholders in the implementation and monitoring of the strategy for the rights of persons with disabilities 2021-2030 and national disability strategies;
24. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to include planning and programming appropriations earmarked for policies and objectives seeking to improve the living conditions of persons with disabilities in the European structural and investment funds, while respecting the principles of accessibility and non-discrimination;
25. Points out that petitioners' most common concerns regarding the equality of persons with disabilities centre around accessibility and social protection, along with employment rights and the right to live independently in the community; calls, therefore, on the Member States to fully implement and continuously monitor all accessibility-related legislation, including Directive (EU) 2019/882 (the European Accessibility Act) in order to effectively and definitively remove and prevent barriers for workers with disabilities, and to improve and ensure the availability of accessible services and the suitability of the conditions under which these services are provided; calls in this context on the Member States to consider the interconnectivity between the accessibility of services and the accessibility of the built environment when transposing the European Accessibility Act into national legislation;
26. Calls on the Commission to support the Member States to ensure the necessary conditions at local, regional and national level to allow persons with disabilities to enjoy their rights to free movement, self-determination and personal choices on an equal basis with others, to live independently and to be included in the community, as laid down in Article 19 of the UN CRPD; calls on the Member States to improve the accessibility of information provided by public administrations by using open and accessible formats;
27. Invites the Committee on Petitions to collect and provide statistical data on the processing of petitions and stresses the need for the committee to ensure it can provide interpretation in sign language, as should all committees of the European Parliament, in order to ensure access to information and participation;

28. Calls on the Member States to take advantage of the opportunities provided by relevant EU funds for job creation and training for persons with disabilities, to guarantee and support full accessibility of public spaces and infrastructure and to ensure EU-funded actions reach persons with disabilities; regrets the fact that the EU funds continue to be used to build new segregated settings for persons with disabilities in a number of Member States;
29. Calls on the Commission to start revising the Employment Equality Directive as soon as possible with a view to fully harmonising it with the provisions of the UN CRPD and implementing a participatory process aimed at ensuring the direct and full involvement of organisations that represent persons with disabilities;
31. Points out that hiring support systems should not reduce the wages of persons with disabilities, particularly through public co-funding; points out that the hiring of persons with disabilities must be based on the employment framework applied to other workers, in terms of pay and working time arrangements, with that framework being adapted to their needs; takes the view that persons with disabilities cannot be included in the open labour market without a general framework of employment regulation, and the promotion of both wage and collective bargaining;
32. Urges the Commission and the Member States to introduce public and private sector workplace quotas for persons with disabilities in order to make workplaces more inclusive;
33. Highlights the need for financial assistance to enable persons with disabilities to hire or employ specially qualified helpers;
34. Highlights the importance of swiftly addressing accessibility concerns in all relevant policies and instruments, including concerns about public procurement rules and the accessibility of petitions to Parliament;
35. Urges the Member States to ensure adequate coordination of social security for persons with disabilities, including by ensuring that they continue to receive disability support covering extra costs relating to their disabilities even when entering the labour market or when crossing a certain income threshold, in order to support their integration into the labour market and to help ensure their dignity and equality; believes that this should be done through amendments to Regulation (EC) No 883/2004 and by consulting organisations that represent persons with disabilities;
36. Calls on the Member States to exchange information and good practices, especially with regard to the transition from institutional care to independent living, the provision of accessible and affordable housing for persons with disabilities and inclusion in the community;
37. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to step up their efforts to tackle the persisting disability employment gap and to foster access for persons with disabilities to quality and sustainable jobs; welcomes, in this regard, the proposal of the Commission in the European Pillar of Social Rights action plan to include the disability employment gap in the revised social scoreboard;

38. Calls for the full implementation by the Member States of Council Directive 2000/78/EC of 27 November 2000 establishing a general framework for equal treatment in employment and occupation; urges the Member States to develop employment prospects for persons with disabilities by improving their implementation of the directive, particularly Article 5 on reasonable accommodation, and by investing EU funds and Recovery and Resilience Facility funding in training and job creation for persons with disabilities;
39. Highlights that job-matching, vocational profiling, concurrent employment and training, in-work induction and training support and career development opportunities play an important role in helping persons with disabilities to secure and retain paid employment;
40. Calls on the Member States to ensure that labour markets and work environments are open, inclusive and accessible to persons with disabilities, to support employment services, to raise awareness of inclusive employment practices, to put in place adequate incentives and support measures for companies, in particular micro, small and medium-sized enterprises that recruit and train persons with disabilities, and to ensure that general self-employment schemes are accessible to and supportive of persons with disabilities;
41. Points out that inclusive education and vocational training programmes are two of the key prerequisites for a more inclusive labour market; calls on the Commission to ensure that the upcoming EU approach to micro-credentials for lifelong learning and employability is accessible and inclusive and reflects on how to improve the realisation of the right to work of persons with disabilities; calls on the Member States to take advantage of the opportunities that the improved Youth Guarantee provides for employment, education, traineeships or apprenticeships for young persons with disabilities, to ensure equal access for persons with disabilities and to introduce tailor-made policies;
42. Stresses the need to step up research and innovation in the field of accessible technology in order to strengthen the inclusiveness of labour markets for persons with disabilities; emphasises the importance of information and communication technologies for mobility, communication and access to public services for persons with disabilities;
43. Calls on the Member States to explore the opportunities and potential brought by digitalisation and digital solutions and recognise the value of assistive and adaptive technologies for persons with disabilities, with due regard to protection of personal data and ethical concerns; recalls that the potential of the use of digital tools and assistive technologies depends on the opportunities persons with disabilities have to develop their digital skills; stresses that the development of necessary digital skills and knowledge of AI can provide a labour market foothold for vulnerable groups such as persons with disabilities;
44. Calls on the Member States to guarantee the right and access to inclusive education for every child, calls on the Member States to swiftly implement and make use of available EU funds to support the implementation of the European Child Guarantee; stresses the importance of early, individualised and comprehensive support for children with disabilities, their parents and carers; calls on the Member States to pay special attention to children with disabilities and special educational needs;

45. Calls on the Member States to encourage workplace adaptations and take action to improve occupational health and safety; calls on the Commission to pay special attention to workers with disabilities in the upcoming EU strategic framework on health and safety at work and to set ambitious goals;
46. Invites the Commission and the Member States to ensure that rural development programmes and strategies include specific outreach measures for persons with disabilities living in rural areas and to involve them in the design and implementation of said programmes and strategies;
47. Stresses that persons with disabilities should be guaranteed access to healthcare and education, including during crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic, and that Member States should tackle all forms of discrimination and exclusion in this area;
48. Regrets the fact that persons with disabilities and their support network were excluded from the priority groups under the EU's vaccination strategy; urges the Member States to offer persons with disabilities and their support network priority access to vaccination; demands, in this regard, that receipt of a COVID-19 vaccination be based on the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities and that the autonomy and legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities and autistic persons, must not be undermined by measures that are deemed to be for the public good or in the best interests of the person;
49. Calls on the Council to unblock the proposed horizontal anti-discrimination directive without further delay, thereby extending EU protection of persons with disabilities beyond the sphere of employment;
50. Points out that the new EU disability platform should be aligned with the guidelines set out in the European Pillar of Social Rights;
51. Calls for EU and national investigations into the disproportionate COVID-19 infection and death rates in nursing and care homes, residential services for older people and person with disabilities and other social services, with a view to understanding the causes, identifying those responsible and taking the necessary measures to prevent such cases in the future;
52. Calls for sites where vaccinations are delivered to be physically accessible and provide live guidance and assistance for those who need it; calls for free or low-cost targeted accessible transport programmes wherever necessary.

OPINION OF THE COMMITTEE ON CIVIL LIBERTIES, JUSTICE AND HOME AFFAIRS

for the Committee on Petitions

on the protection of persons with disabilities through petitions: lessons learnt
(2020/2209(INI))

Rapporteur for opinion (*): Tom Vandendriessche

(*): Associated committee – Rule 57 of the Rules of Procedure

SUGGESTIONS

The Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs calls on the Committee on Petitions, as the committee responsible, to incorporate the following suggestions into its motion for a resolution:

- A. Whereas the EU and the Member States should adopt all appropriate measures for the implementation of the rights in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD), and modify or withdraw current measures that constitute discrimination against persons with disabilities; whereas the EU and the Member States should take into account the protection and promotion of the fundamental rights of persons with disabilities in all policies and programmes;
- B. Whereas it is essential for the EU Institutions' websites to implement the necessary technical specifications in order to be accessible to persons with disabilities, so that they can receive up-to-date information on all issues that concern them, with the aim of increasing the accessibility of documents, videos and websites and promoting alternative means of communication;
- C. Whereas women with disabilities are two to five times more likely to experience violence than other women¹;

Justice

- 1. Calls for the effective implementation of the CRPD, in particular during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, in key areas of life for persons with disabilities; recalls that this implementation should be accompanied by proper national integration strategies; emphasises the importance of ICTs (information and communication technologies) for mobility, communication and access to public services; points out that the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted and intensified the challenges faced by persons living in institutions;

2. Highlights the importance of persons with disabilities' entitlement to exercise their fundamental rights on an equal basis; stresses the need to recognise that persons with disabilities enjoy legal capacity on an equal basis with others in all aspects of life, in line with Article 12 of the CRPD; calls on the Member States to take appropriate and timely measures to provide effective, fair and inclusive access to the justice system and law enforcement for persons with all kinds of disabilities at all stages of the process; urges the Member States special attention to be paid to women with disabilities; emphasises that facilities and services must be accessible in order to ensure equal access without discrimination to justice and the entire legal process;
3. Stresses the need for more and regular awareness training for justice and law enforcement staff on crisis intervention and management and conflict de-escalation when interacting with persons with specific disabilities;
4. Stresses that imprisonment of persons whose disability is incompatible with detention must be prevented, and that alternatives to prison sentences should be provided; calls on the Member States to ensure that the fundamental principles of equality of treatment, non-discrimination, reasonable accommodation and accessibility are respected for detainees with disabilities;

Data protection

5. Stresses that any processing of personal data must fully comply with Regulation (EU)2016/679 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data, and repealing Directive 95/46/EC (General Data Protection Regulation - GDPR); underlines that pursuant to the GDPR the processing of genetic or biometric data for the purpose of uniquely identifying a natural person and of data concerning health (sensitive personal data) is prohibited unless it is expressly allowed by the GDPR;

Governance

6. Considers that priority should be given to ensuring that public services, including digital public services, are accessible to persons with disabilities; calls for policies to promote public services, including digital public services that are accessible for persons with disabilities in line with the rapid advances in information technologies; recalls that information should be accessible, in particular by using simple and understandable language and illustrations for persons with learning impairments²;
7. Highlights that reasonable accommodation, accessibility and universal design are crucial for combating discrimination against persons with disabilities; underlines the importance of effective non-discriminatory access involving the identification and removal of obstacles and barriers that hamper the access of persons with disabilities to the goods, services and facilities available to the general public; stresses that effective, non-discriminatory access for persons with disabilities should be provided under the same terms and conditions as for persons without disabilities wherever possible, and that the use of assistive devices by persons with disabilities should be facilitated, including aids to mobility and access, and such as recognised guide dogs and other assistance dogs where necessary³; recalls that accessibility standards should be adopted in consultation with persons with disabilities and their representative organisations, since their expertise is essential for the identification of accessibility barriers; highlights that reasonable accommodation, accessibility and universal design are crucial to combating discrimination against persons with disabilities;

8. Calls on the EU institutions to ensure the highest accessibility standards in their infrastructures, services and digital services, to make every effort to publish their documents related to legislative procedures in a user-friendly and accessible way, and to ensure that persons with disabilities can properly and fully access their websites and contact forms; encourages the Member States to develop programmes which aim to include persons with disabilities in society through sport, the arts, culture and leisure activities, and which promote their participation in the political process without any constraints;
9. Calls on the Member States to organise information campaigns drawing attention to disability-related issues; proposes the creation of projects to raise awareness of the needs of persons with disabilities, which use positively the power of cultural tools, such as through the promotion of cultural events, as a part of a broader educational strategy to promote and protect the rights of persons with disabilities;
10. Underlines that people with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities, continue to face multiple and intersectional discrimination based on their disability and their gender, race, ethnicity, age, religion or belief, sexual orientation, migration status or socioeconomic background; calls on the Commission and the Member States to take into account the diversity and heterogeneity of persons with disabilities when designing and implementing policies and measures;
11. Highlights that full and effective participation of persons with disabilities in all areas of life and society is crucial for the exercise of their fundamental rights;
12. Considers that the proposed EU horizontal anti-discrimination directive⁴ is an essential legislative act for a correct implementation of CRPD policies and urges the Council to unblock the negotiations;

Employment

13. Underlines the need for adequately funding the equipment that persons with disabilities need so as to ensure that they can use the best available technology and equipment for their everyday life, for their employment and social participation; calls on the Member States to use EU funds to improve these services and related infrastructures;
14. Calls on the Member States to promote and ensure a legislative and policy framework for the participation of persons with disabilities in the labour market; calls for economic policies to be drawn up to enable people with disabilities to secure access to jobs and fair pay in line with their intellectual and physical skills;

Education

15. Considers that equal high-quality education for persons with disabilities must be prioritised and be inclusive when and where possible and advisable; recalls that education is a fundamental human right; encourages the Member States to promote high-quality education and lifelong learning⁵; stresses that good education is important for individual development; underlines that good education helps to increase awareness about persons with disabilities; stresses the need to increase the participation of young people with disabilities in training taking into account their needs, which would provide them better access to the labour market; notes the benefits for children from linguistic minorities with special educational needs to learn in their mother tongue during early years education in cases where it is difficult for them to use language and communicate; calls on the Member States to ensure access to minority language education for children with special educational needs;
16. Draws attention to the importance of early childhood intervention and to the fact that children with disabilities must participate and be included in society from the very early stages of their lives; points out the need to increase the funding opportunities for inclusive education, when and where possible and advisable, both for the promotion of inclusive education's impact on children with or without disabilities as well as for the funding of research in inclusive education; considers it necessary to encourage the use of new technologies, including ICT, mobility support devices, ancillary devices and technologies that are suitable for people with disabilities; stresses that education is central to individual development, and that accessible learning environments for persons with disabilities offer them the possibility to fully contribute to all aspects of the society;
17. Stresses the importance of teaching staff in the education of children with disabilities and special needs; urges, therefore, that training, further training and specialist training in this field be made available to them;
18. Calls on the Member States to pay attention to persons with disabilities living in institutions; is concerned that the COVID-19 pandemic highlighted and intensified the challenges faced by persons living in institutions; calls on the Member States to adopt deinstitutionalisation strategies and to ensure that their laws, policies and programmes on deinstitutionalisation are in line with the concept of independent living set out in the CRPD;
19. Underlines that, according to the CRPD, the EU should mainstream a disability perspective in all its gender policies, programmes and strategies; endorses the CRPD's recommendations, and urges the Commission and the Member States to step up efforts in this regard; recalls that persons with disabilities often have their views disregarded in favour of other people speaking or making decisions on their behalf; further urges the Commission and the Member States to involve persons with disabilities in all their diversity and of all backgrounds in EU decision-making;
20. Notes the Commission's commitments in the EU Strategy for the Rights of Persons with Disabilities 2021-2030; calls on the Commission to mainstream the situation of women with disabilities in all EU policy and measures, in particular, in future initiatives relating to gender-based violence.

SUGGESTIONS

The Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality calls on the Committee on Petitions, as the committee responsible, to incorporate the following suggestions into its motion for a resolution:

- A. whereas 46 million women and girls in the European Union are living with disabilities²;
- B. whereas women and girls with disabilities experience multiple intersectional discrimination and challenges arising from the intersection of gender and disability with sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, sex characteristics, country of origin, class, migration status, age, or racial or ethnic origin; whereas women with disabilities from minority backgrounds are more likely to experience triple discrimination on account of their vulnerable situation; whereas discrimination creates obstacles to their participation in all areas of life, including socio-economic disadvantages, social isolation, gender-based violence, forced sterilisation and abortion, lack of access to community services, culture, sports and leisure, low-quality housing, institutionalisation and inadequate healthcare; whereas these obstacles diminish the probability of fully participating in, actively engaging in and contributing to society, including in education and the labour market;
- C. whereas in the European Union 20.6 % of women with disabilities are in full-time employment compared with 28.5 % of men with disabilities³; whereas figures show that, on average, 29.5 % of women with disabilities in the EU are at risk of falling victim to poverty and social exclusion, compared with 27.5 % of men with disabilities⁴;
- D. whereas the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities notes that women and girls with disabilities are at greater risk of violence both within and outside the home; whereas some Member States have not yet ratified the Istanbul Convention; whereas extending the areas of crime to encompass specific forms of gender-based violence in accordance with Article 83(1) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU) will provide greater protection for women and girls with disabilities;

Protecting the rights of women with disabilities

- 1. Welcomes the Disability Strategy 2021-2030 and its references to the specific challenges faced by women and girls with disabilities; calls for the intersection of gender and disability to be mainstreamed in all EU policies, programmes, initiatives, and in Member States' national action plans; calls for optimising the use of the existing and future EU funding instruments to promote accessibility and non-discrimination;
- 2. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to ensure the full development, advancement and empowerment of women with disabilities and to promote their participation in public decision-making; points out that adequate measures should be put in place to ensure that their perspectives are fully taken into account and that, together with disability-specific consultative bodies, the participation of organisations representing women with disabilities is promoted;

3. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to urgently address the gender-based violence that women and girls with disabilities face to a disproportionate degree via the Istanbul Convention and by extending the areas of crime to encompass specific forms of gender-based violence in accordance with Article 83(1) of the TFEU; calls on the Commission to use this as a legal basis to propose binding measures and a holistic EU framework directive to prevent and combat all forms of gender-based violence; calls on the Commission to ensure that the needs of women with disabilities are included in initiatives that provide support to victims through the Gender Equality Strategy and the Victims' Rights Strategy, and to ensure that support for victims is designed in accordance with the principle of accessibility;
4. Regrets the gender-based discrimination that women and girls with both physical and cognitive disabilities experience within the medical sector; considers that women and girls with disabilities must have full and equal access to medical treatments that meet their particular needs, via disability-specific healthcare and mainstream services; calls on the Member States to ensure further education of medical professionals with regard to the specific needs of women and girls with disabilities, and to ensure that women and girls with disabilities receive all appropriate information to enable them to freely take decisions regarding their health;
5. Calls for universal respect for, and access to, sexual and reproductive health and rights; regrets the backlash against women's sexual and reproductive health and rights in some countries, which is particularly harmful for women and girls with disabilities, who face additional obstacles in accessing healthcare; emphasises the importance of Member States taking all necessary measures to combat forced sterilisation; urges the Member States to ensure public investment to guarantee full access to sexual and reproductive health and rights for women and girls with disabilities; regrets that sexuality education is often denied to girls with disabilities; urges the Member States to ensure comprehensive and inclusive education on sexuality and relationships;
6. Calls on the Member States to guarantee an accessible, non-stereotyped education system, with inclusive education measures, which prepare women and girls with disabilities for the labour market, with a specific focus on digital capabilities and lifelong learning, and to guarantee that women and girls with disabilities can choose their areas of study, to enable them to pursue jobs that they want to do and in which they can use their full potential, and in which they are not limited by inaccessibility, prejudice or stereotypes; acknowledges the link between education and subsequent employment; stresses the need for full access to education in order to combat the employment gap;
7. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to address the employment gap faced by women with disabilities, notably by tackling gender stereotypes, strengthening their participation in the digital economy, increasing their representation in education, training and employment in STEM subjects and occupations, and combating deterrents to work such as sexual harassment; calls on the Commission and the Member States to take concrete measures to ensure that women with disabilities participate in decision-making and receive equal pay for equal work via binding pay transparency measures, to combat their high risk of in-work poverty and to adjust labour regulations such as flexible working arrangements and parental leave to their specific needs; calls on the Commission and the Member States to support social economy business models and initiatives aimed at improving social and labour inclusion of women with disabilities through the Action Plan on Social Economy;

8. Notes that more data and information collection are crucial for understanding the situation that women and girls with disabilities face; calls for relevant, accurate and disaggregated gender-sensitive and disabilities-sensitive data to account for the challenges faced by women with disabilities, particularly in the labour market.
