Recalls Article 3 of the Treaty on European Union, which stipulates that the EU must ensure that Europe’s cultural heritage is safeguarded and enhanced; insists on the fact that upholding the required level of protection for human health and the environment does not conflict with the preservation of European heritage; calls, therefore, on the Commission to take these considerations into account when deciding whether to grant authorisations for substances listed in Annex XIV to the Registration, Evaluation, Authorisation and Restriction of Chemicals (REACH) Regulation when these substances are necessary for the restoration of cultural heritage; asks the Commission, in such cases, to carefully assess the socio-economic benefits derived from the use of such substances against the risk posed to human health or the environment, so that both interests are adequately preserved, and to consider the existence of suitable alternative substances or technologies, in line with the requirements of Article 60 (and other relevant Articles) of the REACH Regulation;
