Proposal for a directive
Recital 1 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

(1a) It is important to establish a legal framework that will effectively tackle planned obsolescence, which undermines the very reparability and longevity of purchased goods. To that end, the extension of warranty periods should be regulated, along with the establishment of production and assembly standards that make it possible to take products apart and replace components, including by users, when applicable, and a ban should be introduced on the inclusion in the programming of any application of lines of code that aim to reduce the lifespan or effectiveness of a device.
