Amendment 53

Manu Pineda

Motion for a resolution

Recital A a (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Aa. whereas the People's Republic of China has been described by the EU institutions as a cooperation partner, a negotiating partner with conflicting interests, an economic competitor, and a systemic rival; whereas, however, for many years EU has managed to maintain mutual advantageous relations with China which balanced the different challenges stemming from very different constitutional, political and ideological structures and self-understanding of both the partners grounded on historical and cultural experiences and developments including the relations between both entities;

Recital A b (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Ab. whereas the EU's announced systemic rivalry can increasingly be seen as the overriding paradigm in how the EU deals with China; whereas this development is influenced by US efforts to shore up its allies across the globe — including Europe — as President Joseph Biden seeks to counter Beijing's rising influence;

Or. en

Amendment 56
Manu Pineda

Motion for a resolution
Recital A c (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Ac. whereas instead of keeping diplomacy and political dialogue to settle differences and conflicts in the mutual relations, to clarify historic reasons for current interpretations of different interests and by that to create an understanding of the various approaches for shaping the current relationship and to understand and accept the systemic rivalry as a task for constructive competition and cooperation, sanctions have become the policy tool of choice of the EU with the aim to penalises political behaviour which has led to reciprocals measures by China;
