Motion for a resolution

Paragraph 16

Motion for a resolution

16. Highlights the need to take into consideration the links between the forest-based sector and other sectors as well as the importance of digitalisation and investing in research and innovation; stresses the crucial role of wood-based materials in substituting fossil-based alternatives in industries such as the construction industry, the textile industry, the chemical industry and the packaging industry;

Amendment

16. Highlights the need to take into consideration the links between the forest-based sector and other sectors as well as the importance of digitalisation and investing in research and innovation; stresses the need to prioritise the most efficient use of wood following the ‘cascading principle’ starting from using it for most value adding applications, i.e. for construction and furniture purposes, and the continued need for forest-related research and innovation throughout the forest value chain, including wood-based products that can play as a substitute in the textile industry, the chemical industry and the packaging industry;

Motion for a resolution

Paragraph 16 a (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

16a. Calls on the Commission to review the accounting rules for bioenergy as a part of a review of the Renewable Energy Directive; stresses the need to prioritise timber for uses with a long life cycle, as construction and furniture; notes with concern that at EU level, reported data indicate that energy accounts for 48 % of total use of woody biomass; highlights the urgency to stop using EU funds to support bioenergy production from wood, except if the biomass comes in a large majority from leftovers at the end of the wood value chain;

Amendment

17. Stresses that due to climate change, natural disturbances such as droughts, floods, storms, pest infestations, erosion and fires will occur more frequently, causing damage to forests in the EU; emphasises, in this context, the need to better prevent such events by making forests more resilient, for example through research and innovation and by offering better support mechanisms for affected areas and properties so they can be restored;

research and innovation and by offering better support mechanisms and financial instruments for affected areas and forest owners so they can be restored and adapted;

Amendment

17a. Stresses that effective adaptation strategies will be crucial to lessening the detrimental impacts of climate change on forest fires and their negative effects in the rural economy, biodiversity and provision of ecosystems services; underlines the need for more resources and development of science-based fire management and risk-informed decision-making to tackle the effects of climate change in forests, taking into account the socio-economic, climate and environmental roots of forest fires;

Amendment

17a. Observes that agroforestry, the combined cultivation of trees and agricultural crops and/or a combination of tree growing with livestock farming, could reduce forest fires, particularly in

Mediterranean countries; points, furthermore, to the importance of a comprehensive and well-maintained network of forest roads and regular forest management in preventing and managing forest fires, thus avoiding the release of carbon from unnecessary forest fires, which affects the climate; stresses that opportunities for large-area pest control should be increased;

Amendment

21a. Highlights the value and the potential of newly established and traditional extensive agroforestry systems for agricultural production, diversification, including for the purpose of bioeconomy, carbon sequestration, prevention of desertification and potential to decrease pressure on forest ecosystems; regrets that the Common Agricultural Policy did not allow for the maintenance of existing agroforestry systems; notes with concern the current large-scale die-off of iconic Mediterranean high-nature value agroforestry system and urgently calls for change of the rules in order to facilitate regeneration and restoration of existing agroforestry systems, and establishment of new ones; calls on the Commission to coordinate the EU Forest Strategy with the Farm to Fork Strategy in order to achieve these goals;
