Resolution on the situation of the press and media in Iran by Pierre Schori and Jannis Sakellariou on behalf of the PSE

P5-450/00

The European Parliament,

- Recalling its resolution of 16 September 1999 and 13 April 2000

- A. Whereas the independent press is playing an important role in contemporary Iranian political life but noting the escalating harassment, intimidation and punishment of the country's independent journalists and publishers;
- B. Expressing its grave concern for the well-being of the detained Iranian writer Akbar Ganji who has been moved from the relative security of an area of Evin prison to an area of the prison under the control of the judiciary used to house serious violent criminals and drug traffickers;
- C. Whereas numerous other writers, editors and publishers have recently been summoned to appear before the Press Court or other official bodies solely in connection with their attempts to exercise their right to freedom of expression;
- D. Whereas more than 17 Iranian newspapers have been closed over the past weeks;
- E. Dismayed by the arrest of six prominent Iranian intellectuals including Mehrangiz Kar, a women's rights advocate, Shahla Lahiji, publisher of women's books, Ali Afshari, a student leader, Essatolah Sahabi, a former minister and Hamid Reza Jalai-Pur, an editor, for participating in a conference held in Berlin on April 7 and 8, 2000;
- F. Whereas these six intellectuals are charged with "acting against the internal security of the state and disparaging the holy order of the Islamic Republic";
  1. Strongly protests against the steps taken against these individuals whose sole offense has been to exercise their right of freedom of expression;
  2. Calls for the immediate release of Mr Ganji and the other editors, publishers and journalists imprisoned for exercising their protected right to freedom of expression;
  3. Calls on Iran to respect its international obligations as a signatory to the International Convention on Civil and Political Rights, and guarantee the right to freedom of expression and association;
  4. Invites the Iranian government to cease the prosecution of journalists, writers and others in revolutionary courts and the special Court of the Clergy for expression of opinions that in no way threaten public order or national security as these terms are understood in international law;
  5. Encourages the Iranian government to adopt appropriate legislation and regulations with regard to freedom of expression that conform with international standards;
  6. Asks the Council, the Member States and the Commission to take due account of the outcome of this situation when considering the establishment of more normal and mutually productive
