Underlines that leaving the internal market would lead to the UK losing both passporting rights for financial services and the possibility of opening branches in the EU subject to UK supervision; recalls that EU legislation provides for the possibility, in some areas, to consider third-country rules as equivalent based on a proportional and risk-based approach, and notes the ongoing legislative work and upcoming Commission proposals in this area; stresses that decisions on equivalence are always of a unilateral nature; stresses also that in order to safeguard financial stability and ensure full compliance with the EU regulatory regime and standards and their application, prudential carve-out and limitations in the cross-border provisions of financial services are a customary feature of FTAs;

21. Notes that, on common foreign and security policy, the UK as a third country will not be able to participate in the EU's decision-making process and that EU common positions and actions can only be adopted by EU Member States; points out, however, that this does not exclude consultation mechanisms that would allow the UK to align with EU foreign policy positions, joint actions, notably on human rights, or multilateral cooperation, especially in the frameworks of the UN, OSCE and Council of Europe; supports coordination on sanctions policy and implementation, including arms embargos and common positions on arms exports; deleted

21b. Opposes the use of Brexit as a means to increase and accelerate EU militarisation; rejects a Military Union and an EU army; rejects the participation of Member States, including the UK, in European military capabilities and armaments policy, such as Permanent Structured Cooperation (PESCO), which also harms the consensus principle of CSFP/CSDP; objects to the ongoing strengthening of and support for the defence and armament industry; rejects the setting up of the European Defence Fund, the EU defence programme and EU defence research programme, which violate the provisions laid down in Article 41(2) TEU, which says that any expenditure arising from actions having military or defence implications must not be charged to the Union budget; therefore opposes the inclusion of all these EU security and defence policies in the agreement between the EU and the United Kingdom;
