Written declaration on recognition of the slave trade and slavery as a crime against humanity

The European Parliament,

- having regard to Rule 116 of its Rules of Procedure,
- A. whereas since Antiquity, the slave trade and the slavery inflicted on the peoples of Africa have been major responsible for millions of deaths and the deportation of millions of victims totally deprived of their rights and freedom,
- B. whereas this tragedy must be approached as a whole, involving the slave trade carried out by Africans themselves and that practised by the Arabs in the Mediterranean Basin and the Indian Ocean from the 7th century, as well as the transatlantic slave trade and slavery which existed from the 15th century onwards,
- C. whereas this tragedy must remain engraved in the collective memory of mankind,
- D. whereas some Member States, such as France in 2001, have already recognised the slave trade and slavery as a crime against humanity, and whereas the 2001 Durban World Conference against slavery, racial discrimination, xenophobia and intolerance stated that 'slavery and the slave trade are a crime against humanity',
- E. whereas the European Union should follow the lead given by these initiatives aimed at building a society based on tolerance,
  1. Acknowledges that all the forms taken by the slave trade and slavery throughout human history are a crime against humanity;
  2. Calls on the Member States to incorporate into their own laws provisions similar to those adopted by France through its law of 21 May 2001;
  3. Calls on the Member States to incorporate the slave trade and slavery into their school curricula and introduce history and human sciences research programmes on this subject;
  4. Calls on the European Union and the Member States to work, at international level, in particular within the Council of Europe and the United Nations, towards setting a common date to commemorate the abolition of the slave trade and slavery;
  5. Instructs its President to forward this declaration, together with the names of the signatories, to the Council, the Commission, the Member States, and the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Council of Europe.
