

Question for written answer E-010208/2010
to the Commission
Rule 117
Alan Kelly (S&D)

Subject: Ireland and EU Copyright Directives

Can the Commission confirm whether or not there is a European law that requires Ireland to implement laws that would result in a person's internet connection being cut off for copyright infringement or other alleged infringements? If such a law does exist, can the Commission point to the relevant article within the Directive?