

Question for written answer E-8605/2010
to the Commission

Rule 117

Teresa Jiménez-Becerril Barrio (PPE)

Subject: Victims of terrorism

What is the Commission doing with regard to statistics about terrorist attacks and their victims?

Given that the terrorist threat is a reality, and that attacks have claimed lives and will unfortunately continue to do so in future, what action is the Commission taking on behalf of victims of terrorism?

What is the Commission's stance on the valuable work of the European Network of Victims of Terrorism? What is the Commission doing to ensure that the Network is more involved in the coordination of policies in support of victims in Member States and to promote the European charter on the rights of victims of terrorism?

Can the Commission specify what measures are being taken to promote victims' rights, both from a practical viewpoint and also to defend the memory and dignity of victims and seek justice for them?
