Subject: Turkey-European Union accession negotiations in the second half of 2012

Given the Turkish authorities' stance on non-recognition of Cyprus and considering that Cyprus will hold the Presidency of the Council of the European Union beginning 1 July, what does the Commission think will be the impact of these events during the course of negotiations over Turkey's accession to the European Union and during the development of the so-called 'new positive agenda' in the second half of 2012?
