

Question for written answer E-005369/2014
to the Commission (Vice-President / High Representative)
Rule 117
Salvador Sedó i Alabart (PPE)

Subject: VP/HR - Neighbourhood policy and Libya

Since the revolution in 2011, Libya has made some progress towards establishing a regime that is indubitably democratic. The European Union is playing a positive role in this transition to democracy through the provision of funds to develop specific programmes both in the field of health as well as on education, public administration and migration.

- In view of the above, what has been achieved so far through civil society organisations in enabling the population to organise itself, so that it can take responsibility for its own future within a climate of stability and respect for human rights?