Subject: Proposal to set up a European Labour Authority

At the request of the Commission, the following EU administrative body is to be set up: the European Labour Authority, which is planned to become fully operational in 2019. The Authority is to provide information, support cooperation between national authorities in cross-border situations and provide mediation in case of cross-border disputes.

In the light of the above, I would like to ask the following:

- (1) Will the new body not be duplicating the activity of other institutions? Will this not interfere with their remit?
- (2) What will the relationship be between this new authority and institutions responsible for the market, as well as labour law in the Member States?
- (3) In connection with future EPAs, will there be a reinforcement of monitoring and inspection of employers who post their employees?
