Subject: Consumers in EU policy on the circular economy

Consumers are getting more and more concerned about making the right choices when purchasing products. The future transition to circular systems in the EU is inevitable and necessary. Unfortunately, the consumer aspect of the green transition has been largely absent from EU policies so far.

What steps will the Commission take in order to safeguard consumer interests in EU policy on the circular economy and to empower consumers with the right tools so that they can make sustainable purchasing choices in their daily lives?
