Rule 138

Subject: Ban of the use of lead in ammunition and fishing tackle

In April this year, I sent the Commission a question about the planned legislative changes to cut the use of lead in ammunition and fishing tackle, and I would like to ask for more detail on the following points.

How is the Commission planning to modify the definition of 'wetlands', where the ban on lead already applies in the vast majority of EU countries?

I am aware that the Commission has already taken steps towards an overall ban on the use of ammunition and fishing tackle containing lead. What sources did the impact study draw on and what alternative forms of ammunition and fishing tackle does it propose for specific purposes?

I am being contacted, for example, by weapons owners' associations who would like to attend the preparatory meetings. How can these experts become involved in the process?
