Subject: Follow up to Written Question E-002268/2019 on Facebook's digital currency

In its reply to my question about Facebook's proposed digital currency (Libra), the Commission stated that it was carrying out a preliminary assessment with the European Securities and Markets Authority and the European Banking Authority into the legal nature of the currency and any authorisations that may be required.

Could the Commission provide a rough timeline of how this assessment is expected to proceed, in light of the habitual very rapid advancements in this field?
