Subject: Civil unrest in the Member States

The Member States have witnessed a rapid rise in civil unrest, with serious riots in Stuttgart and London.

While this unrest can be attributed to the despair many people are experiencing as a result of the economic consequences of the COVID-19 lockdown, and to protests against racism, does the Commission:

1. consider the unrest to be part of a wider disenchantment with the political establishment across the Member States?

2. believe that societies across the European Union are becoming more polarised along ethnic lines, and that this situation is being exacerbated by the EU’s migration policy?
