Subject: Reports of illegal NGO activity on the island of Lesbos

A number of shocking revelations surrounding the fire in Moria and the situation at the camp have come to light during an interview with German activist Rebecca Somer prompted by recent events. She alleges that two German nationals working for an NGO assisted the arsonists and that fire-fighters attempting to combat the blaze were violently repelled by asylum seekers. She maintains that very few Syrians remain in Moria, most of the inmates being African, and that an Afghan jihadist and Taliban presence has also been signalled to her. Furthermore, she makes a number of alarming accusations regarding involvement of the SeaWatch NGO in people trafficking, drugs running and the illegal supply of passports enabling migrants to get off the island and smuggle drugs to the mainland in their luggage.

Have these allegations been investigated in order to ensure that EU-funded NGOs are not facing charges of sabotage and other illegal activities in Moria?

What action will the EU take in cooperation with Greece in order to shield European citizens from jihadists entering the EU in the guise of refugees?
