to the Commission
Rule 138
Guido Reil (ID)

Subject: Corona and potential treatments

Why does the Commission only support the narrative of salvation through vaccination for SARS-CoV-2, thus departing from standard medical practice which has hitherto consisted in seeking treatment options first?

Has the Commission considered what would happen if the many critics of experimental SARS-CoV-2 vaccines, some of whom are extremely reputable, prove to be right?

To what extent has the Commission taken their arguments into account and documented this?
