to the Commission
Rule 138
Jordi Cañas (Renew)

Subject: EU-level coordination of free transport for Ukrainian refugees

In recent days, several Member States have offered free transport to refugees fleeing the war in Ukraine. Poland was the first Member State to announce this measure, followed by Austria¹, the Czech Republic, Germany and Spain².

In response to this horrific war, and in line with the values of solidarity and freedom and respect for human rights, all Member States should take this measure so as to help refugees and facilitate their free movement throughout the territory of the single market.

Can the Commission therefore say:

Whether it will coordinate the adoption of this measure throughout the Union and by all its Member States so that Ukrainian refugees may travel free of charge on all trains and buses?
