Subject: Support for the shift to more sustainable mobility in the EU

Shifting to sustainable mobility is one of the strategies the EU is pursuing to decarbonise the transport sector, which is responsible for 25 % of greenhouse gas emissions in the EU.

1. Apart from all the measures to decarbonise the sector on the supply side, what other steps are being taken to encourage consumers to switch to more environmentally friendly modes of transport? Are further measures in the pipeline?
2. The project providing Interrail passes to young people also serves cultural purposes and helps build European identity; are any similar projects in place or under development?
