

Question for written answer E-003531/2023
to the Commission
Rule 138
Loucas Furlas (PPE)

Subject: Illiteracy in the digital age

Although it is true that the EU has low rates of digital illiteracy, in a transition period in which the use of technology is going to become increasingly necessary, we need to ensure that the small percentage of citizens who remain digitally illiterate gain the required skills.

In the transition towards a digital age, digital illiteracy means social exclusion. This needs to be addressed so that no one is left behind.

In view of this:

What steps is the Commission taking to reduce even further or, if possible, eradicate digital illiteracy?

Submitted: 1.12.2023