Subject: Bullying via mobile phones

According to a recent survey carried out by a major children's charity in the UK, 1 in 4 children in the UK have been bullied or threatened via their mobile phone or personal computer.

In view of this disturbing finding, does the European Commission have similar statistics for mobile phone or personal computer abuse involving children across the EU?

If there is no such information, would the European Union undertake to carry out a survey of mobile phone and personal computer bullying of children across the European Union?
