Subject: Report on multilingualism

Increasing globalisation, resulting in the displacement of the languages of culturally and economically weaker countries by the languages of dominant countries, has given rise to the need for languages to be legally protected. A prerequisite for taking essential action is the drawing-up of a reliable report on the state of languages, containing the most up-to-date statistics on trends in the use of all European languages.

Does such a report exist and is it possible to obtain a copy?
