Patryk Jaki, Joachim Stanisław Brudziński, Jadwiga Wiśniewska

Motion for a resolution

Recital A a (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Aa. whereas the increase in the number of Dublin procedures in 2016-2017 compared to 2014 is clearly linked to migrants who arrived in Europe during the crisis moving to their destination countries, which places a significant administrative burden on some Member States; points out that this results not only from the architecture of the Dublin system, but above all from differences in integration and social policy between Member States;

Or. pl

Amendment 22

Annalisa Tardino

Motion for a resolution

Recital A a (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Aa. whereas a recent study published by Europol expects “an increase in the movements of irregular migrants”, thus putting under further pressure EU external borders;

Motion for a resolution

Recital A b (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

Ab.    whereas in the recent years a significant new trend was an increase in the number of applications lodged by third-country nationals who travel visa-free or with a short-term visa to enter the Schengen area; whereas in 2019 the number of applications lodged by third-country nationals who travelled visa-free accounted for one-quarter of all applications; whereas the rate of protection of these third-country nationals is often low while the volume of application is high; whereas visa waiver or short-term visa also represent a regular and safe path to enter the EU for third-country nationals eligible to international protection;

Damien Carême

Motion for a resolution
Recital B

Motion for a resolution

B.    whereas one-third of the Member States currently play host to 90% of asylum seekers;

Amendment

B.    whereas, as a consequence of implementation of Article 13, according to which it is the responsibility of the Member State of first entry to examine an asylum application, responsibilities are not distributed fairly among the Member States; whereas one-third of the Member States currently play host to 90% of asylum seekers; whereas some Member States have transferred roughly the same number of asylum seekers as they have received from other Member States, in practice thereby largely negating the redistributive effect of Dublin transfers;

Paragraph 1

Motion for a resolution

1. Amendment

1. Considers that the Dublin system places a significant burden on a minority of Member States, in particular when influxes of migrants occur; takes the view that *in-depth changes are needed to the rules and criteria for assigning responsibility, moving beyond the principle of first country of irregular entry, broadening the concept of family unit and adding other connecting factors to determine responsibility for examining an application for international protection; considers it vital to establish a mandatory solidarity mechanism that is automatically applicable to all Member States; the mechanism should have no application thresholds and be constantly updated, making for fair sharing of burdens and responsibility among Member States on the basis of objective criteria such as Gross Domestic Product, population and unemployment rate in the various Member States; considers it essential to relocate to the various EU Member States - directly at the time of irregular entry into the territory of the Union, and without prior screening of any kind - all those seeking international protection in the Union; considers, in this regard, that any prior screening has the sole effect of imposing excessive burdens on the Member States of first arrival and can under no circumstances replace a thorough individual examination of an application for international protection; is of the view that provision should also be made for an ad hoc redistribution mechanism for all those who are rescued in the course of a search and rescue operation and who request international protection; considers, furthermore, that the Dublin system should always be able to ensure flexibility of application, in particular by avoiding the laying down of rules that involve the sole, permanent responsibility of one Member State;
