

WRITTEN QUESTION P-1560/00
by Brigitte Wenzel-Perillo (PPE-DE)
to the Commission

Subject: Duty of the Member States to submit reports

Given the entirely unsatisfactory answer to my question concerning the Member States' current duties to report to the European Union (Written Question P-0222/00¹), could the Commission make another attempt at providing an answer, particularly in view of the substantial reporting requirements imposed by the conclusions of the Lisbon European Council?

Otherwise the Commission might create the impression that it has lost track of the reporting requirements imposed on the Member States over the years.

Could the Commission break down the various reporting requirements, indicating the relevant legal provisions, policy fields and legal bases and the frequency with which reports should be submitted?
