Subject: Ecological thinking under the Commission's Danube Strategy

On 6 October 2008, the Commissioner for Regional policy, Danuta Hübner, announced her intention to promote a European Danube Strategy. As she put it, this would 'need a targeted policy for the Danube that meets its ecological, transport and socio-economic needs'.

Will the Commission describe what thinking has been developed about the Danube Delta's ecological needs and specifically how this will be incorporated during development of this strategy?
