Subject: Publication of criteria for identifying biofuels with high and low risk of indirect land-use change

Bearing in mind that the Commission undertook in June 2018, as part of the agreement reached on the Renewable Energy Directive, to bring forward a delegated act on 1 February 2019 setting criteria for the classification, in terms of high and low risk of indirect land-use change, of biofuels which are increasingly being cultivated in carbon-sink areas and that, to date, it has not done so:

- (1) Does it intend to fulfil its undertaking on schedule, so as to leave sufficient time for the requisite procedure in Parliament?
- (2) Can the Commissioner indicate how the general thrust of the criteria will ensure compliance with the principle of sustainability as laid down in the directive?
- (3) Does the Commission intend to open a window for consultation to obtain the views of stakeholders?
