Subject: Cost of translating the 'You are EU' campaign into a non-official language of the EU

A number of media outlets linked to the Catalan separatist movement have reported Commission sources that indicate the 'You are EU' campaign will be translated into a language which is not an official language of the EU, even though it was decided that the campaign would be published only in the 24 EU official languages.

In view of the above:

1. Can the Commission confirm if it will be allocating economic, material and human resources to translating all or part of the 'You are EU' campaign into languages that are not official languages of the EU? If so, what is the total amount of those resources?
2. If this translation is going ahead, can the Commission detail the criteria used to decide which non-official EU languages will be used for the campaign? Can it explain why Commission's Representation in Barcelona has ceded to pressure by certain politicians (who have pending court cases)? Can it say why the Representation has given in to the demands of those groups, who have no qualms about ignoring court rulings and the language requirements in the region in question?
