PPE:

amendment 10

First part 'Expects the Commission and the Council to deliver on the Defence of Democracy package in order to urgently take action and close the numerous loopholes in EU party financing legislation, find a compulsory regulatory scheme for the big platforms and step up the EU's cyber defence against possible attacks on our electoral system; urges the EU institutions and the Member States to make significant and lasting investments in strengthening our democratic resilience and the rule of law, including through measures directed at enhancing the EU's counter-intelligence capabilities; underlines that criminal investigations into spying charges are the competence of the Member States; highlights that, in almost all Member States, Russian spy networks have been uncovered; invites the Member States to strengthen their efforts and cooperation, including to neutralise attempts to acquire sensitive technology from EU companies to fuel Russia's military capabilities; welcomes the fact that several EU countries have launched special investigative committees devoted to countering Russian influence;'

Second part 'but notes that others have recently dissolved theirs; regrets that, in some cases, those who should be rewarded and specially protected by national authorities for dismantling networks of Russian and Belarusian spies and for effectively countering their hybrid warfare, are instead persecuted on political grounds;'

Verts/ALE:

§ 9

First part 'Expresses particular concern about recent reports that the Russian authorities are providing specific narratives to far-right political parties and actors in different EU countries, most notably in Germany and France, aimed at subverting public support for Ukraine, following Russia's full-scale invasion in 2022;'

Second part 'stresses the seriousness of Russia's connections with parties and politicians in the Union and its extensive interference in secessionist movements in European territories;'
