health; whereas the prison authorities have been denying him adequate medical treatment;

- G. whereas the timing of these new charges follows extensive advocacy on Abdulhadi Al-Khawaja's case at both the UN and EU level, including the case being highlighted in September 2022 in the UN Secretary-General's annual report on reprisals, in October 2022 in the EU-Bahrain Human Rights Dialogue and in November 2022 in the UN Universal Periodic Review of Bahrain; whereas for over a decade the Danish government has relied on private diplomacy with the Bahraini government to secure the release of Al-Khawaja without its demand being met;

- J. whereas according to reports, the Bahraini authorities have increased repression against online and social media activity and prosecuted critics for peaceful expression; whereas reports state that the COVID-19 pandemic was used as a pretext to further limit the freedom of expression in the Kingdom;
- K. whereas 26 persons are currently on death row in Bahrain and all face imminent execution, having exhausted all legal remedies;
- L. whereas digital surveillance in Bahrain has increased significantly in recent years, with interception of text messages, deep package inspection, surveillance of social media and calls with the NSO's Pegasus software, according to the Guardian newspaper and Amnesty International; whereas European companies are among those who have supplied Bahraini authorities with interception technologies; whereas Bahrain uses surveillance technology to intercept the communications of human rights activists, resulting in their arrest;
