Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

Article 7(a)
Right to a lighter administrative burden and reduced bureaucracy

The establishment of an efficient, comprehensive victim support system entails combining services provided at various levels of government and by Member States, regions and local authorities. Consequently, mechanisms enabling access to services must be simplified, coordination of information sources must be improved and measures must be taken to streamline the administrative procedures victims have to complete to gain access to these services. The Member States will thus strive to:

a) establish a ‘one-stop shop’ for administration and guidance to provide victims with all services offered to them by public administration in a single visit. These facilities must provide victims with effective representation or guidance in the administrative procedures for access to the support or compensation to which they are entitled, whatever the level of administration at which it is effectively provided.

b) house the rooms used for these guidance services in or as near as possible to law courts, police stations or basic social service facilities, and entrust their management to the authorities closest to citizens or the level of government most appropriate to the internal systems of the Member States, given the volume of services they provide to victims.

c) advocate the principle of single registration to ensure that victims need produce basic supporting documents proving the facts of their condition and the circumstances only once – except when these change – and ensure that the resultant repository of documents will be accepted by any authority involved in providing assistance or services to the victims of crime.

d) give priority to victim support services in public authorities’ range of online services.

e) ensure that these administration and guidance services – where provided – are available by telephone via 112, the single European emergency number.

The Commission shall propose a single European logo to identify these one-stop shops, to be displayed on their buildings and on the Internet.

Amendment 387
Carmen Romero López
Proposal for a directive
Article 15 – paragraph 1 – subparagraph 2

Text proposed by the Commission
The first subparagraph shall not apply where national law provides for restitution or compensation to be awarded in another manner.

Amendment
The first subparagraph shall not apply where national law provides for restitution or compensation to be awarded in another manner. However, victims shall not be referred to civil proceedings in order to claim damages or compensation since that could subject them to re-traumatisation, stress and other unreasonable burdens.

Justification
victims which are referred by the criminal court to civil court for damage claim and compensation in most of the cases give up; they cannot bear to have to go through further legal proceedings were they are confronted with the perpetrator again.

Amendment
3. Member States shall ensure that all other victims receive a timely and individual assessment, in accordance with national procedures, to determine whether they are vulnerable, due to their personal characteristics or the circumstances or the type or nature of the crime, to secondary and repeat victimisation or intimidation.

3. Member States shall ensure that a timely and individual assessment is carried out for all other victims, in accordance with national procedures, to determine whether they are vulnerable, due to their personal characteristics or the circumstances or the type or nature of the crime, to secondary and repeat victimisation or intimidation.
Justification

Identification of a victim’s specific vulnerability in accordance with paragraphs 3 and 4 should not end up being a complex and stressful formal assessment procedure for the victim. Rather than talking of an ‘individual assessment’, it would be better to use terms like the ‘assessment of individual cases’ or ‘investigation of an individual case’. In some cases this may also mean the use of an expert, but the text of the Directive should allow for the necessary flexibility.

Member States shall ensure that all other victims receive a timely and individual assessment, in accordance with national procedures, to determine whether they are vulnerable, due to their personal characteristics or the circumstances or the type or nature of the crime, to secondary and repeat victimisation or intimidation.

 Amendment

3. The competent body at each stage of the procedure shall decide on the vulnerability of the victim in each individual case. The competent body shall determine which special measures, as provided in Articles 21 and 22, vulnerable victims should benefit from. The dignity of the vulnerable victim and any wish not to benefit from special measures should be accorded particular attention.

Or. de

Justification

Any assessment means that the victim once again has to re-live the ordeal and come to terms with the anxiety and stress. It delves deep into the private sphere of the victim and can produce further stress and feeling of victimisation. Assessments should therefore be the exception and be carried out as delicately as possible for the victim.
