Marietje Schaake
1. Believes that the strategic importance of the EU-US economic relationship should be re-affirmed, and that the EU and the US should design common approaches to global trade, investment and trade-related issues such as standards, norms and regulations;

Amendment 49
Yannick Jadot

Draft motion for a resolution
Paragraph 1 a (new)

1a. Stresses the need to accompany the TTIP by the formulation of an ambitious common European industrial policy informing the Union's position on industrial tariff elimination, raw material and energy policy, competition and IP policy, localization and performance requirements, the role of public procurement for the switch to a green economy, and regulatory cooperation on future technologies;

Amendment 50
Paul Murphy
1a. Does not trust the Commission to negotiate an agreement with their counterparts in the United States of America that will be mutually beneficial for the majority of people living and working in the EU and the US; therefore calls on the Council not to approve the draft negotiating mandate and argues generally for the drafting of the draft negotiating mandates and for the negotiations themselves to be fully transparent and open to public scrutiny;

Or. en

Amendment  51
Helmut Scholz

Amendment

5. Retains that the emphasis in the Final Report on: (i) ambitiously improving reciprocal market access for goods, services, investment and public procurement at all levels of government; (ii) reducing non-tariff barriers (NTBs) and enhancing the compatibility of regulatory regimes; and (iii) developing common rules to address shared global trade challenges and opportunities, will unfold its potential only if based on a common set of values geared at a transatlantic leadership in the global ecological conversion of economic activities; warns that in the absence of a common ecological base a TTIP would mainly increase competitive pressures, jobless growth, global rifts between competing regional economic blocks and contribute to the dysfunctionality of the multilateral trade system;

6. Supports the view that, given already-existent low average tariffs, the key to unlocking the potential of the transatlantic relationship lies in the tackling of NTBs, consisting mainly of customs procedures and behind-the-border regulatory restrictions; supports the objective proposed by the HLWG to move progressively towards an even more integrated transatlantic marketplace;

Amendment

6. Argues that, given already-existent low average tariffs, a key to unlocking the potential of the transatlantic relationship could lay in the tackling of NTBs, consisting mainly of customs procedures and behind-the-border regulatory restrictions, as long as this approach is not misused to undercut values based regulatory restrictions; retains that many regulatory restrictions are rooted in transatlantic divergences on health, safety and environmental standards and the role of the state, regards as key to unlocking the potential of the transatlantic relationship a common ambitious vision of the future social and environmental needs of the global economic system;

- concrete and measurable results from the U.S. Government on NTMs with a view to eliminating unnecessary or obsolete measures such as the Jones Act hindering EU-U.S. trade; the Commission shall regularly report on progress in this area to the Council and Parliament,

- eliminating existing NTMs in the automotive sector such as the ‘American Automobile Labelling Act’, or the low cetane rating of Diesel in the U.S., double certification needs emerging from C-TPAT,; encourage the Commission and the U.S. government to extend their cooperation regarding safety standards and environmental issues in WP29,

- a staggered schedule for sensitive tariff reductions in the EU to allow EU industry sufficient time to adapt to increased competition,

- effective bilateral safeguard measures to prevent a surge in imports that would cause, or threaten to cause, serious injury to EU or U.S. economic sectors, especially in sensitive sectors such as the automotive and electronics industries and agricultural products,

- active measures to support the transatlantic market integration of SMEs,

- reference to international health and plant health standards and disciplines, in particular those laid down by the Codex Alimentarius, the World Organisation for Animal Health (OIE) and the International Plant Protection Convention (IPPC),

- a chapter on sanitary and phytosanitary measures that does not undermine EU standards and that fully respects the rejection of the vast majority of the EU population of genetically modified organisms, of the bleaching of chicken, and the cloning of animals,
- enforceable measures to protect Geographical Indications (GIs),
- a public procurement chapter that does provide for the exclusion of local level administration, public utilities, and defence and security procurement; a chapter that does not contradict localisation requirements in public procurement of Member States,
- a robust and ambitious sustainable development chapter way beyond core labour standards, including the four ILO priority conventions for industrialised countries; this chapter shall also include the establishment of a civil society forum that monitors and comments on its implementation and the effective implementation of multilateral agreements on the environment, climate protection, animal welfare and the conservation of biological diversity; the chapter shall not be excluded from the dispute settlement mechanism including a possible suspension of the agreement;
