Global parliamentarians: The role of the legislative branch in building national mechanisms for atrocity prevention

April 13–14, 2017
The Hague Institute for
Global Justice
The Hague, Netherlands

Overall Meeting Objectives

1. Organizers and MPs review how parliamentarians can contribute to mass atrocity prevention, specifically through the creation of national mechanisms for atrocity crimes prevention¹
2. Organizers and MPs share experiences related to legislative action for atrocity prevention.
3. Both organizers and MPs leave the meeting with strong awareness of the best practices and legislative roles for creating a national mechanisms and taking action to prevent atrocities, the roles and expertise required for each in doing so, and a clear path forward for follow up and closer work together in the future to advocate, train, and sensitize lawmakers to develop national mechanisms and take action to prevent mass atrocities.
