Amendment

1. The controller or the processor as the case may be shall obtain an authorisation from the supervisory authority prior to the processing of personal data, in order to ensure the compliance of the intended processing with this Regulation and in particular to mitigate the risks involved for the data subjects where a controller or processor adopts contractual clauses as provided for in point (d) of Article 42(2) or does not provide for the appropriate safeguards in a legally binding instrument as referred to in Article 42(5) for the transfer of personal data to a third country or an international organisation.

Or. en

Justification

As Recital 70 rightly mentions that the general obligation to notify processing of personal data to the supervisory authorities produces administrative and financial burdens, it should not be replaced by a similar obligation. Data controllers shall rather take part in consultations and produce detailed impact assessments which need to be provided only on request to the supervisory authority.

1. Where an impact assessment has been undertaken in accordance with Article 33, the controller must consult the supervisory authority in accordance with this Article if, despite the measures envisaged in the impact assessment to ensure protection of personal data, the controller considers that it is likely that the intended processing would result in serious harm to fundamental rights and freedoms of data subjects.
as referred to in Article 42(5) for the transfer of personal data to a third country or an international organisation.

Justification

There are cases where the risks of a particular processing operation are such that a controller should consult the supervisory authority before deciding whether to carry it out. If a data protection impact assessment has been conducted, this should be taken in account.

Louis Michel

Proposal for a regulation
Article 34 – paragraph 1 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

Amendment

1a. Member States may submit by law the processing of personal data by public or private institutions who execute a task of public interest, such as the contribution to the application of the social security or to the execution of public health, to the prior authorization, in order to avoid processing which gravely affects the data subject's fundamental rights.

Amendment

(b) the processing is carried out by an enterprise and the outcome of any privacy impact assessment, as referred to in Article 33, on the processing related to its core activities, especially core activities which by virtue of their nature, scope or purposes require regular and systematic monitoring of data subjects, indicates a high degree of risk to the rights and freedoms of data subjects, especially their right to privacy, irrespective of the measures taken by the controller or processor to mitigate such risks. In all other cases, the designation of a data protection officer is optional;

Or. en

Justification

The organisational size criterion (>250 employees) is not useful to differentiate between organisations with respect to the scope of this article. Instead, a risk-based approach in Article 35 would be better suited to achieve the goals of this Regulation. Therefore, the appointment of a data protection officer (DPO) should only be required if the data processing operation related to its core activities poses a high risk. Only in such high risk situation, the obligatory appointment of a DPO is justified. In any other case, the appointment of a DPO should be optional.

Amendment 2199
Sari Essayah, Eija-Riitta Korhola

Proposal for a regulation
Article 35 – paragraph 3

Text proposed by the Commission
3. Where the controller or the processor is a public authority or body, the data protection officer may be designated for several of its entities, taking account of the organisational structure of the public authority or body.

Amendment
3. Where the controller or the processor is a public authority or body, the data protection officer may be designated for several of its entities, taking account of the organisational structure of the public authority or body. Several public authorities or bodies may also, taking account of the organisation structure of the public authorities or bodies, jointly designate a data protection officer.

Justification

The option to allow for several public authorities or bodies to jointly designate a data protection officer is of great value for small and mid-sized public authorities and bodies. In practice, public authorities often also cooperate in the field of data processing.

Article 35 – paragraph 3

Text proposed by the Commission

3. Where the controller or the processor is a public authority or body, the data protection officer may be designated for several of its entities, taking account of the organisational structure of the public authority or body.

Amendment

3. Where the controller or the processor is a public authority or body, the data protection officer may be designated for several of its entities, taking account of the organisational structure of the public authority or body. Member States may adopt specific rules to provide for the designation of a data protection officer for groups of public-office holders.

Or. en

Justification

The offices of public office-holders usually do not have the size and structure comparable to other public authorities. In many cases, the public authority may consist of only one competent person: the public office-holder himself. Therefore, Member States should at least have the possibility to provide for the designation of a joint data protection officer for a group of public office-holders (e.g. at the level of the professional supervisory body).

Proposal for a regulation
Article 35 – paragraph 3 a (new)

Text proposed by the Commission

3a. Where the controller belongs to a professional body or a body of controllers from the same sector, he may appoint a data protection officer duly mandated by the body concerned.

Amendment

Or. fr

Justification

Pooling has the undeniable advantage of providing a clear insight into the particular characteristics of a given profession in terms of data protection and raised awareness on the part of the controllers concerned. The proposed amendment would enable professional bodies to appoint shared data protection officers while leaving the professionals concerned free to decide whether or not to use the service.

Data protection officers shall be bound by secrecy concerning the identity of data subjects and concerning circumstances enabling data subjects to be identified, unless they are released from that obligation by the data subject. Where in the course of their activities data protection officers become aware of data for which the head of the data controller or a person employed by the data controller has the right to refuse to give evidence, that right shall also apply to data protection officers and their subordinates.

Amendment

The controller or the processor shall designate a data protection organisation or a data protection officer for an initial period of at least two years in case of a data protection organisation and for an initial period of at least four years in case of a data protection officer, as long as he/she is not an external service provider. In the least case the period for data protection organisations shall apply. The data protection organisations or data protection officers may be reappointed for further terms. During their term of office, the data protection officer may only be dismissed, if the data protection officer no longer fulfils the conditions required for the performance of their duties.
